Celebrating the Differences: Adapting Biblically to Marital Differences

Taylor University, 2000. 166 pages.

When we as Christians commit to a spouse for life, we are accepting all the commands in Scripture that instruct us on how to meet the needs of our spouse. This book provides insights into what God expects us to provide for our mates, the research necessary to understand what our mate wants, and strategies for changing so that knowledge is lived out in personal life. The author lays out five goals for the publication of this work. They include to lay a scriptural understanding of marital needs, to present research that describes the needs that marriage partners say are important to them, to give not only practical suggestions but also the process steps to be taken to put these suggestions into practice, to engage the reader in a creative format, and to give a model of how scriptural truth and psychological research can be integrated into practical issues of life.

LIBRARY POLICY BEAT
Reviewing Library Policies and Operational Issues

CURRENT POLICY ON SUNDAY LIBRARY HOURS

Students often inquire about the possibility of providing Library hours on Sunday, and the current Library policy, which is an extension of the current University policy, precludes it. The Library staff is committed to this policy, so in order to make it more broadly understood, we felt it would be wise to share the current policy with faculty and staff, since you too might have questions about our position on this issue. The Sunday Policy for the Library is as follows:

“The current University position on the Library being closed on Sunday is an institutional preference, not connected directly to a Biblical Mandate. However, it is possible to read into Exodus 20:8 a strong Biblical principle about the nature of the University’s approach to Sundays. The University has tried to develop a philosophy that supports a conviction about the importance of Sunday, opportunities for local church ministry, and a change of pace for families. The Library administration desires to allow its staff–non-student and student alike–that same privilege.

This conclusion is certainly consistent with the spirit and intent of the current institutional position, as articulated in the Student Handbook on page 15 which states, “We believe that the Lord’s Day is to be set aside for special devotion concerning the things of the Lord. There are to be no University-sponsored activities during Sunday services or during Wednesday night prayer meetings. All University athletic facilities are closed on Sundays.” As well, each University faculty and student voluntarily subscribes to the Standards of Conduct which states, “We also believe that Christians have an obligation....to have a sincere respect for the Lord’s Day.” While properly respecting the individual Christian liberty of all believers regarding the issue of studying on Sunday, the University has and can continue to enforce an institutional preference to keep the Library and other facilities closed on Sunday.”

LIBRARY USE BY THE EXTENDED UNIVERSITY FAMILY

With the summer months approaching, please be reminded about the use of the Centennial Library by extended University family. The primary role of the Centennial Library is to provide information resources, access, and services in support of the academic program of the University. In order to fulfill that role, our first priority is to serve the students and faculty of Cedarville University. However, we do sense a responsibility to the broader University family. According to policies established a number of years ago, faculty, staff, and student spouses and older children not employed by or enrolled at the University are welcome to use the Library within certain parameters. These spouses and children can receive borrowing privileges for Centennial Library materials. Patrons in this category must complete a registration form and receive a Centennial Library Courtesy Card. A child under 18 must have the form signed by a parent accepting responsibility for the child’s Library use. Children under 12 will not be registered nor have personal borrowing privileges. Since a user bar-code will be affixed to the Library card, each patron must have his/her own valid Library card in order to borrow materials. Using another family member’s card or another’s Cedarville University faculty/staff ID card will not be acceptable. Library privileges and user responsibilities for this category of patrons are generally the same as for Cedarville University students except that they cannot borrow materials from the Curriculum Materials Center. For complete information on these arrangements, ask at the Circulation Desk for the Centennial Library Policies brochure on University Staff.

In addition, as children are out and about more during the summer, remember that children under 12 must be accompanied by an adult when coming to the Centennial Library. Children, aged 12 through young adolescence, coming into the Centennial Library unattended, should be coming with a specific purpose and the knowledge of their parents. Those children who conduct themselves inappropriately in the Library will be asked to leave.

CURRICULUM MATERIALS CENTER USE

Pursuant to the policy review item above, it is also important to remember that the Curriculum Materials Center is a resource center for Cedarville University Education faculty, elementary education majors, secondary education majors, and graduate students to provide curriculum and support materials for them to investigate and use in their course work and practice teaching. The Center is NOT intended to be a library for children or young adolescents nor a “babysitter” for children while parents are involved in other Library activities. The Curriculum Materials Center, therefore, is not a substitute for the public libraries for children and young adolescents. Only Cedarville University faculty members, staff members, and students with valid University ID cards can borrow materials from the Curriculum Materials Center. CMC borrowing privileges are not extended to those with only a Centennial Library Courtesy Card.

SUMMER 2002 AT THE LIBRARY

This summer of transition to the semester system is a short and busy one for the Library staff. Since the academic schedule for the summer is very crowded, please carefully review the summer Library hours being provided. These public hours for the Library for the Summer of 2002 are detailed on the Library Home page, CedarLINK or you can use the direct link below. The Curriculum Materials Center and the Media Resource Center will be available during all the Library summer hours. AV Services will be staffed Monday through Friday, 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

For those faculty intending to use media hardware, software, or the classroom technology equipment during the summer school sessions, please contact Scott Deetz in AV Services at 7853 for assistance in scheduling and for technical support.

In addition, full-time staff will be available during the summer in the Media Resource Center and in the Instructional Technology Assistance Service to provide technical assistance and support. Should faculty have graphics production projects, classroom technology support projects, or instructional technology applications you would like to explore in preparation for the Fall quarter, this would be a good opportunity to get a head start on those projects. If you have questions about the resources and staff available to you, please contact Carl Brandon, Assistant Library Director for Media Services.
