Spotlight On:

Touring Teams - HeartSong

September 30, 2005

Volume 17, Issue 6

HeartSong Touring Teams selects, equips and sends out three music teams to represent Cedarville. Each team is a nine member ensemble consisting of vocalists, keyboard players, a guitarist, a percussionist, an auxiliary instrumentalist, and sound technician. Jim Cato, director of HeartSong, said the most rewarding aspect of directing HeartSong is "watching former team members leave Cedarville to serve faithfully in local churches around the country."

As I talked with four HeartSong members, they all expressed their desire to combine their passion of music with ministry. They also stressed HeartSong is a lot more than just music; it's about people. Luke Seeley, a vocalist, decided to get involved with HeartSong to use what he loves to minister to people. Cara Slaybaugh, an auxiliary member of HeartSong, remembers the times she was able to stay up to fellowship and pray with her hosts. "It was neat to connect with these people and see the bond we have in Christ with people we just met." Jessica Waggoner, a vocalist, learned about real love for people from HeartSong. "I learned what real love for people looks like and how little of that I have." Tyler Anderson, a sound technician, said the most rewarding thing for him was the life lasting friendship he's made and the rewards of spending time with people, both impacting others and being impacted.

Remember to keep all of the HeartSong teams and the drama teams in your prayers this weekend as they have their first weekend of tour.
