Class of 2013,

CONGRATULATIONS and WELCOME! It is with the greatest pride and pleasure that I welcome you to a very elite and distinguished group: the Cedarville University Alumni Association. I know you have worked hard to get here and now have a world of opportunity in front of you.

As the President of the Cedarville Alumni Association, I want to welcome you and suggest the connections you have made at Cedarville — and the memories you created here — are only just beginning. I encourage you to find the Alumni Association chapter in your new city and continue to strengthen those connections. Through your local chapter, you will have opportunities to network and socialize with others who share the same connections to Cedarville, as well as learn about current events, local churches, activities, and a host of other topics.

As an initial introduction to what is waiting for you wherever you go, please accept this “Life After Cedarville” guide as a gift from your Alumni Association. In it, you will find helpful tips from some of the 29,000 Cedarville Alumni who came before you.

I wish you much success wherever the future takes you.

Sincerely,

Jason F. Atwell ’98
President, Cedarville University Alumni Association
Our mission is to strengthen relationships between alumni, students, and the University to inspire them toward lifelong leadership and service for Christ and a continued commitment to the mission of Cedarville University.

All alumni are automatic lifetime members of the Cedarville Alumni Association. There are no dues to join or membership papers to sign.

Use the many resources available to help you start your new life:

Cedarville Alumni Chapters
Get plugged into the Cedarville chapter in your area — they’re all across the country. Network with fellow Cedarville alumni, attend fun and educational events, and much more!

Alumni eNews
The top way our alumni stay current with Cedarville news. Sign up to receive monthly updates delivered right to your inbox.

cedarville.edu/enews

Facebook and Twitter
For all you social butterflies, follow us around online to stay connected and hear the latest news about Cedarville alumni.

facebook.com/cedarvillealumni
twitter.com/cvillealumni

Homecoming Weekend
On the first Saturday of each October, hundreds of alumni come back to the ‘Ville to reconnect with friends, professors, and their alma mater. Whether you’re coming for a class reunion or or one of the many festivities, homecoming weekend is reserved for alumni! Mark your calendar and plan to join us October 4–5, 2013.

Please contact us if we may ever be of assistance to you, and congratulations on your accomplishments!

Your Cedarville Alumni Association
cedarville.edu/alumni
1-800-837-2566
Pray for the students, faculty, and staff.

Represent Cedarville in your community by being a person of character and telling the story of Cedarville’s impact on your life.

Participate in the life of the University. Attend homecoming, home and away athletic events, and campus and regional events; stay informed by reading Cedarville Magazine.

Support the University financially. A gift of any size is a vote of confidence in what Cedarville stands for and demonstrates alumni support.

Employ Cedarville alumni or students when you learn of an internship or position available in your workplace, school, or church.
Table of Contents

Grad School .................................................................................................................. 8
Job Searching .................................................................................................................. 12
Your First Job .................................................................................................................. 20
Money and Finances ...................................................................................................... 28
Finding a Place to Live .................................................................................................... 38
Around the House ........................................................................................................... 42
Recipes .......................................................................................................................... 46
Finding a Church ............................................................................................................. 52
Your Spiritual Walk ......................................................................................................... 60
Goals and Life Lessons ................................................................................................... 68
Marriage and Relationships ............................................................................................ 82

Special thanks to Jordan Long ’17 for compiling this book
“There is no reason that you should have to pay completely out of pocket for grad school.”

Emily Doane ’06

Grad School
Cedarville prepares its students well for grad school. I’m currently pursuing a master’s degree at a nationally recognized university in a program ranked in the top five in the country, and I have found my training from Cedarville to be a great asset to me.

Anonymous ’05

If possible, attend grad school before you have children.

Jeff Gates ’81

If you are thinking of going to grad school and you’re not quite sure where the Lord is leading you, go to grad school. When I graduated I was thinking about going but didn’t. After I got married and had kids I kept putting it off and never did go back. Go while you are in student mode and don’t have a lot of other obligations. Once you are done you will be glad you did it right away.

Denny Stora ’70

Don’t rush going to grad school right after graduation. You are likely better off working a few years (two-five) and then going back. Real-world work experience cannot be undervalued — far too many 23-year-old grad students don’t have a clue how to work outside an academic setting. The disadvantage of going too soon is choosing something that isn’t the best fit for you. Your preferences will change. Your interests will evolve. You will discover new things working a few years that will inform your long-term goals. I knew in the back of my mind I wanted more education, but I knew I needed to wait and grow a few years post-Cedarville to understand myself better and what would best prepare me. I knew I wanted to do something international, that helped people in the developing world, and allowed me to use Spanish, etc. So I moved to South America for a year to work, then moved to Washington, D.C., and worked for five years in health policy. Those experiences taught me invaluable skills and changed my perspective.

Leaving Cedarville, I thought, international development was the graduate degree for me. However, after working a few years I discovered I didn’t want to work for the government or a nonprofit because I found both models frustrating. I ultimately chose to pursue a M.B.A. with a global, social, and sustainable entrepreneurship focus. With my degree, I can create small businesses in Latin America that provide better incomes for families, help send kids to school, and make a tangible difference that isn’t caught up in bureaucracy or a lack of funds. The point is, I never would have picked this degree without the benefit of working first. I’m pursuing the same goals but with a much better grad degree. Also, you appreciate education so much more a few years later. Last note: Take the GRE/GMAT ASAP. The score is good for five years. Just get it done. Trying to study for it three years from now will be torture. Trust me. It’s a lot to go back to school, at least make the application part easy.

Christie Zimmerman ’05

I worked in my subject area for three years before going on to grad school. I think it helped me mature and also helped me appreciate it more.

Lois (Hanson) Van Leuven ’77

There is no reason that you should pay completely out of pocket for grad school. Check with your employer to see what kinds of tuition remission they offer, but be sure to check the stipulations they place on it. (You typically have to stay with the organization a certain number of years after you graduate.) I had a graduate assistantship that paid for my master’s degree and gave me a stipend on which to live. For my assistantship, I worked 20 hours a week at my university in their Resident Life Department, leveraging my time as an RA at Cedarville. It took some work and lots of prayer to get my assistantship (they are often listed on the university’s HR site), but God provided!

Emile Doane ’06
“IT’S OK IF YOU’RE DOING SOMETHING COMPLETELY UNRELATED TO YOUR MAJOR.”

Anonymous ’01

JOB SEARCHING
Sixteen years ago there weren’t local alumni chapters. I wish there had been because they are great for networking, whether you are going into ministry or business. Reach out to your local chapter, attend events, and become involved. As times are getting tougher on everybody, especially Christians, I encourage networking with Cedarville alumni. Also, never forget that God is in control of all aspects of life and that He opens doors and shuts them, no matter how many people you know. Keep your eyes on Him and strive to follow Him and His will for your life!

_Gordon Rogers ‘97_

Keep in touch with the Career Services office. They will be an invaluable resource and connection as you move and look for a job. Friends of friends of friends will get you the best jobs even 10 years later.

_Anonymous ‘00_

Job searching is hard, but be patient! Know that God is faithful even when you can’t see Him working. It can take a long time to find a first full-time job. Be willing to do whatever you can for your first job. Keep in mind that it isn’t permanent! Chances are your first job will not be your last job. Even if the job you land isn’t exactly what you want, you will learn from it, and God will use you there.

_Sarah (Niedermayer) Banks ‘08_

Remember that you’re not guaranteed a job near home. I _never_ thought I would be teaching in a different state! But God put all the pieces together so quickly and perfectly ... as if it had already been planned without my knowing.

_Anonymous ‘07_

Ask God to help you keep an open mind to whatever plans He has for your life. Just because He led you to choose the major that you did doesn’t necessarily mean He wants you following the expected career course that goes along with that. Be willing to consider the possibility that He may have used your major to train and prepare you for something you never would have even imagined!

_Nikki (Overly) Bender ’10_

“Every time you fail, you eliminate one way that won’t work, therefore moving one step closer to a way that will.” — Thomas Edison

_Anonymous ‘96_
Don’t be anxious about not finding something in your field. Use the knowledge and gifts the Lord has given you and desire to be used in whatever state that you are, and He will bless it. He may not put you where you want, but He will put you where He wants you!
Anonymous ’96

When I graduated from college, I wish I had known that whoever said “It’s OK if you’re doing something completely unrelated to your major” was right.
Anonymous ’00

I graduated from college in 2000 with a communications degree, music minor, and many tears because I wanted to be an elementary school teacher rather than have anything to do with communications. So I went off to New Jersey and became a nanny for a year! It was the year that God really used to direct me where He wanted me to go, and that was off to China for a couple of years to teach drama and speech classes (which I used my communications degree for). I then knew I loved to teach, came back to the states, got my master’s degree in early childhood, and the rest is history.
Anonymous ’00

Decide if it is important to live in a particular geographic location before looking for a job. Don’t waste your time looking for a “dream job.” There is no such thing.
Jeff Gates ’81

I cried and cried during the months leading up to my graduation. I didn’t know where to live, what to do, or what career I wanted, and I was uncertain how to make ends meet. I decided to move in with my mom until I had a steady job. I was also scared because every job I’d ever had was so boring! I hated working. I would have rather stayed in school. But now that I have an actual job and not an internship, I love it so much more! I actually enjoy my job and find fulfillment in what I do.
Anonymous ’08

Nobody steps out of college and lands the perfect job. You have to try some things first to figure out where you’re gifted, where you’re called, and where your passion lies. Trial and error, my friend. You’ll learn as much or more from a wrong turn, so don’t let the fear of a misstep keep you from taking a risk.
Anonymous ’96
Don’t beat yourself up if you can’t find a job right away. God owns the cattle on a thousand hills, and it really is up to Him — really. If you are being diligent in searching and praying, then you are doing your part.

Anonymous ‘07

You think you have a plan. You’ve got it all figured out. Then the bottom drops out. And you know what? It’s OK. Plans are great, but hold them loosely. God moves in ways more amazing than we can imagine, and He will take your foiled plan and craft something even more beautiful than you dreamed. As you search for jobs, whether as a brand-new graduate or years down the road, just know God will weave a magnificent tapestry out of what may seem like bare threads. Dead ends lead to open doors. Open doors might eventually close. But keep moving forward, knowing what may feel futile or ugly is all just an incredible piece to your life’s puzzle. He takes our missteps, our broken plans, and our right moves to His perfect place. It will all be OK.

Anonymous ‘02

Finding it difficult to find a job that you love? Ask yourself, “Where do I find myself in my free time?” then find a way to get paid doing that and pursue that as your career. Most likely it will include doing something utilizing most of your God-given talents. Don’t worry about what your degree was in or what future schooling may be necessary to pursue this avenue. There is no promise of tomorrow, so live life using your gifts to the fullest. You will find that you will be surprisingly happy waking up in the morning to go to work.

Anonymous ‘06

You might not know what you should do with your life right away and have to settle for an unfulfilling job for a long time and feel discouraged that God is not leading you. I feel productive in my spare time when I write letters to my college friends, attend charity/political/community events, and keep learning about topics I’m interested in. The good thing about a job, though, is that it’s not covenantal like marriage — you can run away with anything better that comes along.

Valery Van Wingerden ‘05

IF YOU ARE BEING DILIGENT IN SEARCHING AND PRAYING, THEN YOU ARE DOING YOUR PART!

Anonymous ‘07

Be mindful that God may have distinctly different plans for your future than you do! I graduated with a degree in social science and a Teaching Certificate in Secondary Ed. I am serving as a firefighter/EMT and a Fire Inspector with Gig Harbor Fire in Washington State. A very different career than what I planned on! God has weaved an amazing thread of opportunities into where I am today. Although I do not teach history in a school setting, God has used my CU education to help me get jobs in the past in sales, to serve as a Music Director in churches, and most recently to become a Fire Inspector. Without my CU experience and God’s grace, none of this would have been possible. Trust Him. His plans are better than yours!

Paul Hayes ’84

I’ll be as specific as I can about a general problem — please do not beat yourself up if you cannot immediately find a job in your chosen field, or even if you cannot find a job at all! The Lord’s timing is not our own, and He may have some things to teach you that you could not learn otherwise. It is sometimes a lengthy journey toward the calling that “clicks” with you. If you find yourself jobless and discouraged after two months (or two years!), or at a job you hate, or are tired of fending off questions of “what are you going to do with that major?” take a deep breath, step back, and dig into the Word for encouragement and communion with God. And yes, the job WILL come. Trust me.

Rachel Lewis Alee ’05

Find some kind of work to do! It’s possible, especially with a bad economy, to graduate and not be able to find employment in your chosen field right away. One good strategy that has worked for me, and many other students I’ve counseled, is to just find a way into the job market doing something. It may not be your first, or even second choice of what you’d like to do, but just having work shows the supervisors and employers you are willing to work, you’re hirable, you can show up to work on time, and that you can be flexible.

Willingness to learn goes a long way too. In other words, after graduating, you might have to take a lower paying job at something not using your degree just to break into the job market. And, once you are working, you can get noticed better by other prospective employers. In short, you learn how to work, and gain skills that may be useful later in your own degreed field. Take some kind of work and get going. Don’t wait for precisely the job you want to open up. Several times, I took any work I could get just to keep working, and after being out of school 20 years, went back to school for a graduate degree, and had a world of experience to offer a university to teach in addition to my degree skills. That’s a long time to get back into your own field, but be patient and keep trying to work and get into your chosen field at the same time. The Lord watches over us all, and He will lead you where you need to go; just ask Him to do that. Find some kind of work, and get a résumé built up. Keep a file on your jobs and what you do to make it easier to write up a résumé when you go for the “one you want” job.

Laura Roby ’76
When I first graduated from Cedarville, I wasn’t really seriously job searching because I knew I would be moving from New York to Ohio after getting married. Once I got married and moved to Ohio, I had a hard time finding a job related to what I had studied in college. I was frustrated but needed a job and ended up working at Staples. Definitely not my dream job! Then after about seven months working there, I was made aware of a job opportunity working with someone who planned events. I had always enjoyed event planning but never thought of it as a career. I interviewed for the job and distinctly remember the day they called to tell me I got it! I started that job in September of 1999, and I’m still there with no plans to leave anytime soon. The job has changed and evolved over the years into something even more amazing than I could have imagined. I never knew that what God had in store for me would involve working at Cedarville University and planning events … and that it would be exactly what I was meant to do with my life! I think that no matter what you end up doing or how frustrated you get searching for the so-called “perfect” job, you need to realize that God has not forgotten about you and He is going to provide you with the perfect opportunity when the time is right. And sometimes waiting means not working your dream job right away. But you never know how God can use you so make sure to look for chances to reach out to those around you ... wherever God has put you at that time.

Chrissy Rising Faulkner ’98, Assistant Director, Event Services

Be persistent. Online job search engines are great, but don’t just fill out the application and then sit back and wait. Most employers are far more likely to hire someone who shows an active interest in the job they’ve applied for.

I worked the service desk at a Kmart for two years, and in that time, 75 percent of the new employees hired were people who either came into the store in person to check that their application had come through, or called on the phone to follow up on their application. Persistence really does pay. The fastest application-to-hired situations were people who ran down a manager on the floor and asked how to apply, promptly applied, and contacted him within a few days to follow up.

Follow up on your applications! Ask to speak to the Human Resources Manager, or the Store Manager if HR is not available. If the person answering the phone or manning the service desk says “Oh, so-and-so isn’t available,” find out when they will be available, and WRITE DOWN THE NAME. Ask for them by name the next time you follow up. You get through the gate-keepers much more quickly with a name.

THE LORD WATCHES OVER US ALL, AND HE WILL LEAD YOU WHERE YOU NEED TO GO; JUST ASK HIM TO DO THAT.

Laura Roby ’76
Finally, don’t prejudge the job and say “I’m not qualified;” that is the decision of the HR Manager. Your job, until you have a job, is to apply for jobs. You may think you aren’t qualified, but you may be far more qualified than any of the other applicants! Erin Cahily ’08

If you’re having trouble landing the job that you thought you would get after college — don’t give up! Wait on the Lord. He could have something amazing for you around the corner that you wouldn’t have been able to do if you already had the nine-five job and the picket fence and all those things that we think we need to be happy. Don’t allow frustration or impatience to get in the way of God’s plans. There are so many things that I have been given the opportunity to do because I don’t have a traditional job. Take this time and use it for God’s glory. Lisa Prins ’09

Going into teaching? Be prepared to adjust to the state Department of Education guidelines for licensure. Also, get to know the principal, secretary, and guidance counselors. Start subbing to get your foot in the door and keep a calendar of where and who you subbed for along with if you liked the class or not. Then you will remember in a few months if you want to be in that room again or not! Get some long-term or emergency leaves if possible. Also, use your subbing as a time not to feel like you are out of a teaching job still, but as the transition time between college and the job you are praying to get! Subbing gives you great experiences in a lot of different rooms, allows you to see what works and what doesn’t, and what you will want to do and what you definitely don’t want to do. After two years of subbing, I finally landed my dream job and have been teaching fourth grade ever since. God is still helping me daily to be a shining light for Him in a public school classroom. You can be too, no matter where He leads you to teach! Kristi (Jonker) Calkins ’02

Do not worry about finding the perfect job with certain securities. Find the job that you absolutely love and allows you to minister in whatever opportunities God throws your way. Abby Douglas ’09
I wish that I had known that it was OK that I didn’t have a plan. I didn’t know that my peers, the ones who had a plan were just as terrified as I was. Their constant rehearsing of their plan (“I graduate this day,” “I’m getting married this day,” “I’m moving here on this day,” “I’m starting this job on this day”) was, I think, for their own assurance. “I’m OK, see? I have a plan. Something is better than nothing when you need something to cling to, right?” It’s more honest to say, “I have no idea what I’m doing.” Ask anyone, most people feel like this all the time.
Anonymous ’96
“NEVER FORGET THAT LIFE IS ABOUT SERVING OTHERS EVEN WHEN YOU ARE TIRED.”

Anonymous ’01

YOUR FIRST JOB
Dress beyond the dress code.
Andrea (Patterson) Verwys ’01

Never forget that life is about serving others — even when you are tired. Get your co-worker a cup of coffee, be willing to talk to that student during your free period instead of grading the stack of papers next to you, go out of your way to bring your co-worker a meal when they are hurting, send the newly divorced mother flowers. Always look for opportunities to serve.
Anonymous ’01

Starting a new job after college is a brand-new experience. It won’t be easy, and don’t expect to start out on top. Work hard, pray for God’s will, and always do your best no matter how small the task is. God will reward your hard work and servant’s heart: “Be diligent to present yourself approved to God as a workman who does not need to be ashamed, accurately handling the word of truth” (2 Tim. 2:15).
Alison (Kearney) Clemans ’10

Ask a lot of people how they got started in their careers or if they’re doing now what they thought they’d be doing in college. Note patterns you hear in their stories. What stood out to me is how everyone’s first response was laughter followed by, “I never thought this is what I’d be doing.”
Anonymous ’96

When I graduated from college, I wish that I knew — and I mean fully understood in my deepest being — that God is our provider. I knew that He was, and He completely showed me He was through my whole life, but it didn’t really hit until I found myself crying in bed thinking that I was going to have to work at Applebee’s until I was 60 even though I have a degree and should have an easier time finding a job. It will blow your mind how God provides for you. I hope that you find yourself laughing at the ways you notice His handiwork. For example, after college I had no idea where I was going to go, and I figured that I would take the first job that cropped up. And I did ... in Alaska. I had no money, mind you. The only job I’d had in the past year was my two-month stint at Applebee’s. But guess what He did? I got my plane ticket to Alaska by making bookmarks. Ridiculous, I know. God just cracks me up! He knows just how to delight us, and He is the ultimate provider!
Anonymous ’06
Realize that everybody starts at the bottom right after college, so enjoy being the underdog and working hard to get where it is that you want to go. Network, network, network. It doesn’t matter where you are — in church or in Starbucks or in Africa. Just make friends with anyone and everyone you can (but keep a cautious eye out for creepers).

Anonymous ’06

When I was a receptionist, I learned a lot about how people can get noticed in a company and what to do to get a job. Also, when I graduated, I checked out the Indiana Chamber of Commerce’s “Best Places to Work” list. I started with that list, and that is where I found my current company. Start big and go from there. Walk into companies and hand in your résumé. Send cards to HR people telling them you are excited about the opportunity. Stop in with cookies. Also, be nice to the receptionist; he or she can have a huge influence on who gets an interview. Even at my company with 600 employees, I was able to influence the HR recruiters, and I told them things like “Don’t bother interviewing this person” and “Definitely consider this one.”

Anonymous ’97

Don’t ignore a job because it doesn’t seem to be related to your major. Those jobs will actually prepare you better to get your ideal job in the future. You will have a broader understanding of what it means to work hard and well.

Nate Verwys ’00

Don’t take yourself too seriously. Find something that pays the bills, but do what you love. Always say with confidence when people ask you where you went to school, “I went to Cedarville. It’s a Christ-centered liberal arts university in the middle of Ohio.”

Anonymous ’06

Always be willing to do your best no matter how far down the ladder you or the task may be. Work hard, and you’ll be rewarded for it in the end.

Bill Bigham, Vice President for Advancement

Listen more than you talk. Try to learn from everyone and everything.

Jeff Gates ’81

“My times are in His hands” — the whole Alistair Begg series was phenomenal. God knows what we need more than we do. By all means, aim high for what you really want and what you really think God designed you to do, but if that doesn’t seem to be happening, think of it as a stepping stone. Take what you can get and use that experience to build upon so you are even more useful later. Maybe it’s not the perfect job, but you’ll meet the perfect people to help you get where you want to be or to help you become the person God wants you to be. It’s not about money; it’s about “blooming where God plants you” and being the unique person He has designed you to be.

Anonymous ’98

Expect to feel stressed even if you have your dream job. Learning your responsibilities and all the other new things involved can contribute to stress and exhaustion. Also, there is no perfect job! You’re unhappy? It’s you and not the job!

Beth (Cram) Porter, Chair, Department of Music and Worship

I wish I knew how unprepared I really was for the teaching field. Just because I graduated doesn’t mean I know it all! Find an older, wiser mentor that will give you good advice when asked. Then, use his or her advice. No one is too big for a different way to do things.

Anonymous ’84

Remember, you don’t have to have your whole life planned out. It was OK for me to say that I didn’t know what I wanted to do or to spend some more time in prayer until the right doors opened up.

Anonymous ’04

When I graduated from college, it was very hard to not doubt that God would place me where I was supposed to be and provide for me. I waited three very long months to find a job, but once it happened, everything sort of fell into place. It all worked out how it was supposed to because it happened in God’s timing. That is one thing to always remind yourself of and try to never doubt. A verse that has always helped me is Philippians 4:6–7: “Do not be anxious about anything, but in everything, by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving, present your requests to God. And the peace of God which transcends all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus.” Just remember that you are not in control; God is. But you are in control of your reactions, so pray daily for patience and peace.

Anonymous ’08

Sometimes we can have really high or unreasonable expectations for our first job out of college. We think it should be completely fulfilling or our dream job or that we should know right away what we are doing with life. Patience is key. It may take time to get into the groove of things and really enjoy your job. I suggest you give it a full year before jumping into something different. Plus, having at least a year’s experience looks better on your résumé. Also, don’t think because you are working at a certain place that you’ll be there forever. We live in a very fluid work society. Nothing is permanent, so if you are unhappy, just give it time and see what other possibilities may open up. Seek the Lord!
When I was looking for another job purely because of my own selfish desires, nothing seemed to be working. But when I was content with where I was and allowed God to work, He brought along a wonderful job that I love and that was perfect for me. Remember that whatever you do, do your best and do it to the glory of God!
Lynsey (Fabian) Mandela ’04

Never be embarrassed to ask questions for fear of looking ignorant. Every single person who has started a new job has faced the unknown.
Carla (Womack) LeMaster ’84, Director, Advancement Services

If you are not excited with your job, put more effort into it to the point that you excel in it. You will soon be promoted out of it.
Anonymous ’86

I wish that I had known that God can use humility to bring me to where He wants me to be. I was willing to work a cleaning job (not my favorite thing), and in the midst of that job God dropped an amazing job into my lap!
Anonymous ’99

Don’t expect to land your dream job right out of college and be very happy you have found gainful employment. God will teach you much even in jobs you really don’t like. (Just wait. When you look back in years to come, you’ll see it.) Sometimes you will have to look at a job as simply a way to finance a ministry opportunity you are passionate about. So, especially if you have employment that is lacking in fulfillment, find a ministry you can jump into fully. It will really help to balance things out in your life.
Jon Purple, Dean, Student Life Programs

I wish I had known what a big transition it would be to move into adulthood after being in school for most of my life — and that I didn’t have to have all of the answers right away. The months following graduation, I felt overwhelmed as I tried to navigate living on my own, finding a job and then working full time, and deciding the things I wanted to get involved with. I had never had so much free time, and I wasn’t sure what to do with myself! I wish I had known that most recent graduates go through this same time of uncertainty and that it’s OK. It’s more than OK because it is an amazing opportunity to walk with God and allow Him to direct your steps.
Anonymous ’06

Don’t be above any type of work. It may seem menial, beneath a college education, but what people want to see is that you are willing to do what needs to be done and that you do it without complaining.
Anonymous ’97
Keep your mouth shut at work. Don’t participate in gossip. Be positive! There is too much negativity at work, and when your bosses see your optimism, they will be impressed. Tell yourself you love your job — even if you don’t. Attitude is 90 percent of what makes your day good or bad.

Anonymous ’02

Don’t expect to attain your dream job right out of school, or you may be extremely disappointed! At that point in your life, you may not know the kind of job in your field that will really end up suiting you in the long run. My first job was difficult because I had this “picture” in my mind of what I should be doing, otherwise I would be wasting my potential and forgetting about my long-term goals. But it was through those first few years that God taught me an array of skills that I had never tapped into, only strengthening myself in my profession as a social worker. As a result of God’s humor, I now find myself (temporarily?) off the path I would have chosen for myself, and am more than enjoying it.

Lindsay Stone ’08

Your first job is probably not going to be anything like you ever dreamed of; in fact, it may not be what you studied for either.

My first job out of Cedarville was working in retail, to be specific, as a Front End Supervisor at a local Kmart. My degree was in youth ministry and Christian education.

I loved the challenge of retail, hated corporate management, and learned more about people and teamwork and delegation in the two years I spent at Kmart than I did in any classes during college. I didn’t see what I’d learned working at Kmart until a good year after I’d moved on to a job with my church.

You may find yourself in a job that makes NO SENSE to you at all. Don’t fret. God is in control, and if that’s the job He’s put in your path, there’s a reason, and it may take years before you can see the why. Trust that God has a plan to prosper you, even if it takes some seemingly illogical detours on the way!

Erin Cahily ’08

Now is the time to do that “big and scary” thing that you dream of doing. Do it now before you get stuck in a comfortable job and a comfortable life. Actually, do all you can to avoid getting too comfortable. Now is the time to embark on the adventure. I’ve been a flight attendant since 2006, and it was one of those “out there” jobs that I fancied the idea of but never thought I’d actually pursue. Boy am I glad that I did! But even though I went that route, I still wish I had gone one step further and transferred to a base in another part of the world when I had the chance and the drive. Even in the adventure, it’s easy to play it safe.

Still, God has molded me and given me opportunities I am so grateful for — I have no regrets. He has me where I am for a reason. But no matter where He takes you or what job He directs you to, always leave the reins in His hands, allowing him to take you out of your comfortable life (even the most adventurous lives can get comfortable) and lead you on a new adventure whenever He sees fit.

Sarah Wiegand ’05

Be willing to do anything; experience is everything. You might find yourself in a foreign city where you know no one, making very little money, but have courage and trust the Lord. He will provide what you need in amazing ways. New friends will quickly become like family, and the grocery store is usually right around the corner.

Brianne Collier ’06

It probably won’t be your dream job, but it will most definitely train you to be more effective in your dream job. Expand your expectations and be open to new experiences. Be intentional about professional development and trust the Lord to work all things good for you. Be encouraged!

Stephanie ’05

Don’t freak out about not having a job lined up right out of college — especially in this economy. Find creative ways to use your talents while interviewing for jobs. It took me over a year to get my position in research at a children’s hospital, but during that year, I developed my own photography business that is now good supplemental income. Good luck, new graduates!

Erin McGuire ’11

Don’t snub lowly positions. My receptionist position in a marketing technology company landed me a position as an executive assistant to the Chief Marketing Officer (CMO) six months later. After being in that position for a year, the CMO placed me on the partner marketing team as an associate.

Anonymous ’08
“LIVE WITHIN YOUR MEANS. ENJOY THE SIMPLE THINGS THAT YOU ALREADY HAVE.”

Anonymous ’97

MONEY AND FINANCES
Take the Dave Ramsey class. Cash is good. Stay out of debt. Give, give, give.

Nate ’00 and Andrea (Patterson) ’01 Verwys

This is some of the best advice we’ve taken, and we have been so blessed by it. If you end up getting married, make all your necessary purchases (like rent/mortgage, loan payments, and utilities) from one income. Use the second income for the extras — to increase savings, make extra payments on things, go on a fun vacation, etc. This way, down the road when you’re holding a little bundle of joy in your arms, it is your choice whether to go back to work outside the home or to stay at home rather than allowing the finances to make that choice for you.

Geneva (Roberts) Hall ’00

Tithe no matter what you have earned or been given and no matter how large or small; be faithful with 10 percent and trust the Lord for the rest. Then, for one week every year, live on 10 percent and tithe 90 percent.

Anonymous ’69

Live within your means. Don’t get caught into thinking that you have to have everything now. Enjoy the simple things that you already have.

Anonymous ’97

One of the best decisions my wife and I made a few years after graduating was to take our student loans (and other loans) seriously. If you have an opportunity to pay off or make a huge dent in your student loans, do it! Free up your income so you can do so much more for the Lord.

Joshua Hynes ’03

Some good financial advice I was given was to keep living as cheaply as you can for as long as you can.

Anonymous ’06

Living debt-free can happen. Keep the crate furniture and save up for the real thing. No interest, no payments!

Anonymous ’98

Minister to others — it keeps your eyes off yourself and brings overwhelming rewards. No one has ever regretted giving! Make sure that you take part of your salary and give to others. Tithe!

Anonymous ’05

Be faithful in updating your expense records.

Anonymous ’08
Save money! Live at home (no more than a year) or find a way to save as much of your paycheck as possible. Create an ING account. Then move out of your parents’ house after a year at most. Experience independence; live with a friend or travel. Expand your wings if you are not married yet. Don’t waste your first few paychecks on a brand-new car, as tempting as it may be. Realize that used is better. Cars depreciate the moment they are driven off the lot.

Anonymous '06

Trust. God always provides in amazing ways.

Alastair ‘89 and Kathy (Lippert) ’89 Wright

It’s OK to live with mom and dad for awhile until you get a job and get on your feet. I don’t know why so many think they have to move out right away. Save your money so you can buy a house!

Anonymous ’01

If you are planning to get married, I have a piece of advice regarding finances. If you are both working, try to live on one income and save the other. That way if you have children, a parent can have the wonderful opportunity of staying home during the formative years. Also, if one spouse becomes disabled, you don’t need to worry about living on one income. God bless you as you leave Cedarville!

Cathy (Lombard) Aviles ’87, Staff Nurse, University Medical Services

Be very wise with your money, especially if you move into an apartment and all the bills come in. I didn’t realize what a challenge monthly bills would be — money doesn’t really grow on trees. While in college, it seems like no big deal to go out for fast food and a movie on the weekend, but it really does add up. Also, keep a ledger of what you spend, no matter what it is, so you can see just where your money goes. I’ve seen God provide for my financial needs in miraculous ways. He is so faithful! However, being a good steward is so important.

Anonymous ’08

It is God’s money. Ask Him how He wants you to spend it.

Beth (Cram) Porter, Chair, Department of Music and Worship

Be captivated by Christ. Money doesn’t matter, and the American Dream, getting married, having kids, a house, cars, watching TV — it is all vanity. Knowing Christ and falling in love with Him is why we were created. Take the time to truly get to know the Lord, through His Word, through prayer. Nothing else satisfies.

Anonymous ’07

Pay cash for everything. Save up for vacations, cars, etc. Attitude is a choice, so choose to be positive, even when you don’t feel like it.

Anonymous ’97
Pay off as much debt as you can. You really don’t want it hanging over your head. Take time for adventures while you can. Get any extra education that you need to accomplish for your career as soon as you can. And trust that God will provide for your needs. He will. Pray over the things you believe are in accordance to His will, and watch how He answers those prayers. It’s amazing.

Anonymous ’01

No doubt money is an important factor in decision-making, but we’ve found that decisions driven primarily by financial considerations have been among our worst. Seek God first. Trust Him. He is faithful.

Janice (Warren) Supplee ’86, Vice President for Enrollment Management and Marketing

Pay over and above any monthly loans you may have needed to graduate before you find a man to spend your life with. You have a six-month grace period, so make a payment with every spare amount before it’s over. After the six months is over, you will then have a monthly payment for years to come. If you get married, you will have his monthly payment, too! For 10 years (and two children later!), we paid $200 a month to cover our student loans alone. At times we didn’t have food to eat out because we made so little, and all our “extra” money was spent on loans.

Anonymous ’96

My first week out of Cedarville, I slept on a friend’s couch, and then I slept on another friend’s floor for a few months. I’ve moved eight or more times since 2006 and held a half-dozen jobs, each one leading me to amazing ministry opportunities. There are reasons to be frightened of the future. It’s scary! But we believe in our Jehovah-jireh, the God who does provide! Bills do get paid, somehow, and prayers do get answered. They just do.

Anonymous ’06

Do not put things on credit cards that you know you can’t pay off in full by the next bill. I know several girls my age that have just “charged it” and are now in stress.

Anonymous ’05

Don’t spend money that you don’t have. Be wise with your finances now so you don’t have to deal with issues later.

Anonymous ’98

Live for tomorrow, not today. Also, if you’re married, look to live on one income.

Rob Barnum ’94
Don’t start off your career going into debt. Do not use credit cards; they make life more confusing. It’s biblical to stay out of debt (Prov. 22:7). Learn to manage what you have now, and later you will be far, far ahead of those your age.

Karl Bernhard ‘05

Set a strict budget and stick to it. Buy what you need, not what you want. Live within your means. Save for the future. Don’t charge things you can’t afford.

Anonymous ‘06

Your parents are smart even when you don’t want to hear what they have to say. They just might be giving you some golden nuggets of knowledge that you can hold onto. Balance your checkbook every month. It saves a lot of headache and hassle later on. Pay your bills on time even if it is not the full amount. Companies like to see you are trying. You will get ahead at some point.

Anonymous ‘96

Only borrow if you absolutely have to. Saving up to buy items is much less expensive than borrowing to buy them.

Jeff Gates ‘81

Like Dave Ramsey says, “Debt is dumb.” Also, “If you live like no one else now [live simply], later you can live like no one else [nice car, big house, debt-free!]”

Anonymous ‘98

Live really cheaply the first year or so. Get a roommate for your apartment or move back in with your parents. Use your extra money to pay off school debt, save up for a down payment on a house, or go to graduate school.

C. Aaron Briggs ‘07

Live within your means. It is really important to look at your bills and loans and income and establish a budget. Even if you don’t have a job yet, get an idea of what bills you have or may have. Dave Ramsey is a great resource, and he can help you learn how to budget and manage your money. Also, if you have school loans, look at the interest rates. Pay off any higher interest rate loans quicker. Typically, private loans are higher in interest than government loans. However, still keep things in balance when paying off debt. If you are going above your minimum payment to get it paid off right away but have no money to spend here and there on things you enjoy, you’ll really resent having loans. Work hard to pay them off, but enjoy life in the meantime as well. Budgeting and money takes hard work and consistent monitoring. It’s not usually fun, but it’s worth it. Make it a habit to keep track of your finances early on and you’ll be happy you did.

Lynsey (Fabian) Mandela ‘04
Always follow these five keys to finance:

1. Give first.
2. Save for the future now.
3. Spend less than you make (a lot less).
4. Get out of debt as quick as you can.
5. Get wisdom about finances from trusted resources (like the Bible, Crown Financial, and Dave Ramsey).

Drew Flamm '05

Make a budget. Join a Dave Ramsey Financial Peace University class at a church in the area. It’s great to have practical tools in how to manage your money, and FPU helps with that!

Becky Stowers '01, Dean of Women

Just because everyone else is buying/leasing a new car, don’t think that you have to follow suit! In my early years after college, a friend started driving a new Mercedes. Being a car guy, I was impressed and envious. I reasoned that if he could afford a new Mercedes, I certainly could afford a new Honda Accord. After signing on the dotted line for a payment that really strained my budget, I found that he had leased, not purchased, the Mercedes and that his company was paying most of the lease payment!

Jon Purple, Dean, Student Life Programs

Someone once said, “That man is admired above all men who is not influenced by money.” I believe it was Cicero who said this, but it may have been someone in our University business department. Either way, the advice is full of wisdom. Money can be a wonderful tool or a cruel master. As wise stewards of the resources that God has placed in our hands (no matter how much or how little), may we all glorify God through its use and be content with what is enough.

Robert Rohm '68, Vice President, Christian Ministries

Put together a budget and then stick to it! It may look like you are bringing in a lot of money, but when the school bills start, you need a new car, or have a car repair, it can take that extra money down pretty quickly. Always set aside a little extra “fun” money to treat yourself.

Carol Bliss '87, Circulation Services Manager, Centennial Library
Check with area churches and find a Dave Ramsey Financial Peace University class and attend! Having a budget gives real freedom and the ability to give more abundantly to the Lord’s work.

Anonymous ’83

Honor the Lord with your first fruits, save some, and live on less than what remains.

Bill Bigham, Vice President for Advancement

Use cash to make all purchases for the entire first year following graduation.

Steve Gruber ’74, Chair, Department of Education

Pay your credit card bills in full every month. This may seem like a small, very obvious piece of advice, but it is the main rule that has kept us out of debt for the last 30 years. Don’t spend money you do not have.

Jim Cato ’83, Executive Director, HeartSong Ministries

Spend less than you earn. The whole concept of budgeting is that simple. You may think you know how much you spend, but you probably don’t. So for three months, write down every penny that goes out, whether it’s for a parking meter or the car payment. You may be surprised to see where your hard-earned money goes. This exercise will help you cut back on the stuff you want to make sure you get the things you actually need. Also, deal with your debt as soon as possible. The first step is to stop charging stuff (that makes the problem exponentially worse). The second is to come up with a repayment plan that cuts your debt down faster than it grows. The Bible is packed with deep truths about money. Meditate on them as you seek God’s wisdom for financial decisions.

Stephanie (Hueni) Flamm ’06

Luke 12:15 says “Then He said to them, ‘Watch out! Be on your guard against all kinds of greed; life does not consist in an abundance of possessions.’” Carefully consider what is driving your decision making regarding money and finances. May Jesus be your reward and the pursuit of His kingdom your delight!

Rachel (Batchelder) Parrill ’97, Assistant Professor of Nursing

I wish someone would have told me how important it is to understand your student loans and payment options BEFORE your graduate. I went to Cedarville with NO financial help and am today paying back the six-figure student loans by myself.
I started my freshman year naive and clueless about student loans. I knew I was racking up a bill, but I didn't know how this actually looked and how much money I'd have to make to pay off the loans or how long it would take me to pay them off.

First step – figure out how much you will owe in loans at the end of your four years. Once you figure your monthly payments, put this into a spreadsheet and estimate the rest of the bills you will have once you graduate (rent, electricity, car, etc.). This may help you decide if you should stay at Cedarville all four years, or if you should do a one-year or two-year Bible minor program and go to a much cheaper school instead to finish your degree.

Second step – If you are planning to pay off ALL loans, even Parent PLUS loans, stop there! They shouldn't be in your parents’ name and should be in a STUDENT loan account — go through Chase Student Loans or something. That way your interest rates won't be so high!

Third step – As SOON as you graduate or even before — look into consolidating your loans IF AND ONLY IF you find a provider that will take all of your loans at a lower interest rate than what you already have.

Fourth step – If you double up on payments (I recommend you get this burden off your shoulders as soon as possible), write “add extra to principle” on the checks. That way you aren’t putting extra into interest that shouldn’t go there.

And most importantly – all CU students get a loan from the CU Accounting Service. DO NOT, I repeat, DO NOT be late on this loan payment because it is on TransUnion and a bad credit rating on this will keep you from getting a car or house someday.

Kristen Neal ’08

Save, Save, Save! One thing I regret from college was not working. After I graduated I didn't have a dime to my name, which made saving hard but not impossible. Get a job while you are searching for a more permanent position. Save as much as you can while your loans are in the grace period and before life starts taking off and gets expensive.

Invest in your 401K, HSA, and anything else offered to you. Put money away in these, including a savings account, before you spend it. If it's not accessible, you won't spend it.

Get advice on which type of savings you should have. 401K, IRA, stocks/bonds, etc. This is important, especially in this economy. High risk = high reward, but do whatever is best for you and your financial situation.

Amy Babbitt ’08

Stay out of debt. Be patient, save money, and then buy things!

Wade Harris ’99, Director of Cedarville Fund
Pay off as much of your student loans as you can while they’re still deferred. The money goes straight to the principal during this time and can make a huge dent in your total debt if you work hard to pay as much as you can.

Jess Spears ’05

Do not get drawn into the credit card frenzy that can potentially ruin you financially. Do not get every card offered to you (which could be many), and do not max out the cards you have. Pay off the cards you use every month. Otherwise, the interest you are paying will build and build, and you may never be able to crawl out of that hole.

Anonymous ’90

If you can do it, move back in with your parents for a while to save money. Remember to be as understanding and gracious as possible with them!

C. Aaron Briggs ’07

Live on a written budget in which you spend less than you make so that you can give, save, and invest the difference.

Patrick Oliver, Assistant Professor of Criminal Justice

Live within your income. Have one credit card and make sure you pay it off every month. If you can’t, don’t use it. Save up money for your purchases and then pay yourself back with interest. Pretend you are your own bank. That is what we did with our daughter. For her first car, she bought a car only for the price that she had already saved up for. Now she is paying herself back with a higher interest than the bank, so that when she needs another car, she will be able to use the sale of her car plus the cash that she has accrued. The bank does not get the loan, she does. You can do that with anything. Wish someone had taught that to me when I was her age.

Lois Hanson Van Leuven ’77

Take a Dave Ramsey Financial Peace class as soon as you can. Even if you don’t adhere to all of the advice right away, it still is helpful as far as finances. It might take years to come to financial peace, but what better timing to begin than right after college?

Kristi (Jonker) Calkins ’02

For some graduates, money is very tight. I was blessed with very few expenses after college. At the same time, I am sort of a scrooge when it comes to spending money. It’s very easy to feel super independent because you suddenly have a college degree and a great-paying job. I’ve seen quite a few young folks buying items and spending money unnecessarily. Sure it’d be nice to have a new flat panel TV, nice luxury car, etc., as your first purchase but remember you are only 20 years old and still have the rest of your life to prepare for. Don’t be one of those folks with a $50k car but can't afford a mortgage (there are plenty of folks like that around here in the D.C., area). When you are figuring out your expenses, don't forget to set aside money for your tithe (can be whatever percentage, that's between you and God in prayer) and investments for the future. Don't get stuck in the typical American lifestyle of living paycheck to paycheck. Yes, trust that God will provide but don't be willy-nilly and foolish with your money. Put your money towards charities that you believe in such as your church or local hospital. Most of these have tax benefits for you, too.

Invest in your future financially just as you are to invest in eternity. And please help those in need. It's our duty to help a brother/sister in need, not the government's job. We are members of one Body.

Edward Low '02

I had a really hard time finding a job right after graduation. The recession had hit hard in the fall of 2008 and, unfortunately, that was right when I graduated and started looking for a job. My advice? Get a job in the meantime. While you are searching for that perfect job with pay and benefits, get a side job. Waitress, work at a store, sign up with a bunch of different employment agencies, and take what you can get. This keeps you busy, earning money (even if it isn't much), and sometimes can lead you into something more permanent (i.e., with the employment agencies).

Having insurance was a big deal for me since I was cut off my parents as soon as I graduated. With Obamacare you can stay on your parents insurance until you're 26 if your job doesn't offer it. TAKE THIS. Don't take a job simply for the benefits when you can figure out what you really want to do all while still being insured. Dave Ramsey says that is the No. 1 most important aspect of being financially responsible.

Get a cheap place to live, or, don't be afraid to live with your parents. Many of my friends from the class of 2008 still are, and they are saving money and paying off their loans like crazy. You're not too cool for it.

Wait for that dream job. This doesn't mean passing up every opportunity that comes your way because of a silly factor; rather it means to wait for the job you can either see yourself doing for a long time at a company you are interested in and care about. It took me almost two years to find that for myself, and I made it through. It can be discouraging when your friends seem to have their lives in order and you don't. Don't worry. Is not God's plan better than your own? Good luck!

Amy Babbitt '08
"REMEMBER, YOU DON’T HAVE TO HAVE YOUR WHOLE LIFE PLANNED OUT NOW."

Anonymous ’04

FINDING A PLACE TO LIVE
Ask the alumni office which grads live where. These grads might be able to help you locate a great neighborhood.

Bill Bigham, Vice President for Advancement

When moving into an area you’ve never been before (for a job, usually), it is often a good idea to rent for a while before purchasing a house. This allows you to get familiar with the area, determine which neighborhoods are the best to live in, and take your time in finding a good place to live.

It also allows you an out in case you find out that your perfect job isn’t so perfect after all, and you want to move on in a year or two. Local realtors usually have listings for rentals and can help you find a house to rent instead of just an apartment if you prefer. They also have some ideas of which are the best or most affordable places to live. Check out realtor.com to find a local agent in your area.

Note: it is often considered rude to have more than one realtor employed in helping you, so be sure to know what the realtor expects, and if you have more than one, let them know that. They often call each other to get leads on possible options, so they’ll usually find out if you don’t tell.

Also, don’t let anyone talk you into buying a house sooner than you really can afford. I’d recommend that you wait a few years after graduation at least just to make sure you’ve got your feet under you and that you’ve got a handle on what your budget is going to be, since you’re going to have a ton more expenses than you’ve been used to.

Also, be sure to get either homeowner or renter insurance and insure your personal property, not just the building. That covers you in case of a fire, burglary, etc.

Hannah (Ballou) Sheldon ’04

If you are moving to a new place, pray that God will send you a godly friend! (This sounds dumb, I know, but I have prayed this prayer at a few specific times in my life, and God has always answered)

Anonymous ’05

Consider city living. It is much harder to live in a city once you have a family.

Andrea (Patterson) Verwys ’01
Some advice I received from one of my profs when looking for apartments was to find an apartment with a washer and dryer. Not having to go to a laundromat was wonderful!

Becky Stowers ’01, Dean of Women

Do your research before you move so you know where you’re ending up! Also, sometimes you have to work hard to keep in touch with friends. Don’t neglect that even though your life will get crazy sometimes!

Anonymous ’06

If you ever end up living by yourself in an apartment, try to get the top floor. Yes, it will be a pain moving in and carrying up groceries, but you will feel much safer and get a great leg workout every single day.

Anonymous ’07

Contact local churches to see if anyone in the church owns apartments, rents houses, or has rooms to rent out. They also have local knowledge that may help you.

Andi (MacDermaid) Mounts ’78

Being a real estate agent, if you are going to a new area, my advice would be to rent first. That will give you some time to get to know the area, where you will go to church, where you will shop, etc. Don’t buy the first house you like, even if the agent tells you there is not another one like it, it will go fast, and you must submit an offer today! Take your time. Buying a house is a huge investment, and you want to make sure you are getting the right one at the right price. Don’t max yourself out. Telling yourself you won’t eat out for 30 years will not last.

Carol Bliss ’87, Circulation Services Manager, Centennial Library

Unless you thoroughly enjoy spending lots of time alone or are moving back with your parents in a rural area, live in or near a city where there are universities. They tend to be centers of culture. And churches and activities are closer by. If you’re having a hard time finding a job, look at the job listings at the universities. And if you’re single (or even if you’re married) consider moving to a place with a group of friends. If you’re moving to a city, all sorts of jobs are available. Then you can live in community or very close to your friends. Yes, you must branch out and meet others — but then you’re not alone. It is also helpful to move close to your church. So perhaps you could decide on where you’ll live according to the church you attend or seek to attend. And if you’re having trouble finding a place to live, call churches and ask if their parishioners have rental property. That’s what my husband, Shawn, and I did after we first got married and were in grad school. That’s how we found our first place.

Marlena (Proper) Graves ’00, RD

The Colorado Alumni Chapter is a group of alumni who get together for one or two events a year. Our activities in the past have included baseball games, picnics, service projects, and mini golfing. Attending these events gives you a great opportunity to connect and network with fellow alumni. If you find yourself living in the beautiful Rockies, we would love to meet you at our next event!

Erica (Linafelter) Heddings ’03

As they say around here, Louisville is a great place to visit ... for the rest of your life! If you’re moving here, or thinking about it, you’ll need to know about the Greatest Two Minutes in Sports (The Kentucky Derby), the amazing restaurant scene, and the local spots to hang out. Looking for work or fun things to do? Visit workinlou.com or possibilitycity.com. Both have really helpful resources for getting ‘round town. There are lots of solid churches too, and we were blessed to find an amazing community just up the road from where we live. It’s called Sojourn Community Church (sojournchurch.com). Best of all, we’re starting a Louisville alumni chapter, so get plugged in and stay connected with the ‘Ville!

Steph (King) Minier ’05

If possible, try to live east of your work. Then the sun will be behind you and out of your eyes on your morning and afternoon commutes and you’ll get home faster because traffic moves faster without the blinding glare.

Jess Spears ’05

Regardless of whether you end up someplace you want to or someplace you didn’t, get out and explore! Connect with the locals, find some good eats, and enjoy the city! This will help it feel like home more quickly!

Emma Kollie ’12
NEVER GO TO BED WITH A DIRTY KITCHEN.

Carla (Womack) LeMaster ’84

AROUND THE HOUSE
Thank Chuck. It’s tough taking care of yourself. Meal planning, grocery shopping, cooking, and cleaning up the dishes and kitchen aren’t easy. Oh, there were many days after college I longed for the “convenience” of changing out of my jeans into my dress and making the little trek to Chuck’s!

Melanie (Knauff) Scheerschmidt ’86

Cooking for one is such a pain, so learn the art of leftovers quickly.

Anonymous ’07

Keep Pringles on hand. Most tough times get a little better if you have a can of Pringles to keep you company.

Anonymous ’99

To those of you who will be getting married soon: My wife and I made the habit of doing the following. At home, if one is up working, the other is up working. Whether it may be her in the kitchen or you in the yard, if one is up, you both are up. Guys, girls dig it when you help clean up the kitchen.

Butch Davis ’92

Rinse your dishes right away; it is easier to wash them later because a film or crust won’t form on them.

Michael Clutz ’05

If you’re the spouse who earns the majority of the household income, don’t think for a moment that you get a free pass with work around the house or that it is now your spouse’s responsibility to serve you. Split the housework and child care. If someone cooks, the other should clean up; or better yet, both can share in common household tasks together. Changing diapers isn’t just a mom’s responsibility. Woe to the dad who is too lazy to serve his wife and children in such simple and significant ways.

Chris Miller, Chair, Department of Biblical and Theological Studies

Ladies, no matter how your heart fervors in your chosen profession, there may come a day when your heart longs to stay home with your kids. This is OK! It is not a waste of your college education. There are many opportunities at home to use what you learned at Cedarville University. So feel free to give your heart to your family during that phase of life with joy. Work will wait.

Anonymous ’86

Eat well. Food is a good investment because it affects your overall health. So, definitely deal with the “extra” expense and buy fresh, varied, healthy foods.

Anonymous ’08
Never go to bed with a dirty kitchen. You wake up facing yesterday’s work, and today creates more of the same. There is so much truth to the statement “Don’t put off until tomorrow what you can do today.”

Carla (Womack) LeMaster ’84, Director, Advancement Services

Keep the extra trash bags in the bottom of the trash can.

Beth (Cram) Porter, Chair, Department of Music and Worship

FEEL FREE TO GIVE YOUR HEART TO YOUR FAMILY DURING THAT PHASE OF LIFE WITH JOY. WORK WILL WAIT.

Anonymous ’86

Housecleaning not your favorite job? Pick up and put things away each night before you go to bed. It’s amazing how much neater your house looks in the morning. To keep the dust from getting too thick, plan to do a thorough cleaning of half your house one week and the other half the next week. Of course, kitchens and baths should be cleaned thoroughly and regularly. Once kids come along and you get them to “help” with the cleaning, rotate the rooms they clean each week. If they clean the upstairs this week, have them clean the downstairs next week, while you do a thorough cleaning of the opposite space.

This way you know your house will be cleaned well at least every other week.

Esther (Greenwood) Lanham ’75, Administrative Assistant, Department of Social Work

Touch Once Rule: When changing clothes, hang them up or fold them and put them away immediately. Touching once will save you time in the long run and keep your room clean.

Beth (Cram) Porter, Chair, Department of Music and Worship

White vinegar is great on salads but has multiple household uses:

1) Add a cup to laundry to remove strong odors.

2) Place a bowl on the bottom rack of your dishwasher and add two cups white vinegar. Add dishwasher soap as directed. Your dishes will come out cleaner and shinier.

3) Dilute one part vinegar to one part warm water to mop floors.

Beth (Cram) Porter, Chair, Department of Music and Worship
Furnish your first apartment by purchasing secondhand items. It will give you a chance to get settled and see what you really like. It will also give you time to save some money to purchase new items.

Anonymous ’83

Men, learn how to cook! Don’t be one of these guys who says, “All I can make is reservations.” It doesn’t take much effort to become proficient in the kitchen. Take a class ... or practice on your own. Find a few recipes that you can master and amaze your friends. If you are single, you have to eat somehow, plus cooking is a great way to impress a lady friend. If you are married, you can take your turn in the kitchen or work side by side with your wife. She will love it. If your wife works outside the home and you can occasionally treat her to a meal already on the table at the end of the day, you will earn significant points.

David Bartlett, Associate Vice President for Planned Giving

Decide that you cannot live without scented candles in various fall-like colors and scents that smell so good you want to get a spoon and eat them.

Anonymous ’95

Sleep! You are out of school! No kids! You can sleep now, so do it!

Anonymous ’09

Don’t turn the furnace down more than a couple of degrees when you leave for work/overnight/the weekend. It costs you much more to reheat your apartment or house than to maintain the heat level while you’re gone. Learned this one the VERY hard way. My heat bill in my first apartment was more than my rent one month. Truth.

Jess Spears ’05
“DEFINITELY DEAL WITH THE ‘EXTRA’ EXPENSE AND BUY FRESH, VARIED HEALTHY FOODS.”

Carla (Womack) LeMaster ’84

RECIPES
Taco Soup

Beth (Cram) Porter, Chair, Department of Music and Worship

Each year I have my voice students over for dinner, and each year the menu is the same: Taco Soup. They ask for it year to year, and many ask for the recipe when they graduate. Enjoy!

1½–2 lbs. ground beef
1 onion, chopped
4 cloves garlic
2 packages taco seasoning mix
1–2 cans diced Ro*Tel* tomatoes *
1–2 cans chopped green chilis
4 cans hot chili beans
2 packages Hidden Valley* ranch dressing seasoning mix
2 tbsp. chili powder
1 can cream corn
1 can whole kernel corn
1–3 16-oz. can(s) stewed tomatoes
1 10-oz. can chicken broth

Brown the ground beef. Drain excess fat. Add onions until they are soft. Add the rest of the ingredients and heat thoroughly. Top with grated cheese and sour cream.

* If you would like a less spicy soup, leave out the Ro*Tel* tomatoes, and in their place add 2 cans stewed tomatoes.

---

Broccoli Soup

Rachel (Batchelder) Parrill ’97, Assistant Professor of Nursing

2 10-oz. bags frozen chopped broccoli
1 pt. half and half
2 10-oz. cans cream of celery soup
8 oz. cubed Velveeta*

Combine all ingredients in a crockpot. Cook on low 6 hours. Easy and delicious!
Curried Chicken Salad

Carol Lee ’96, Senior Communications Specialist

6 boneless chicken breast halves, skin removed, cooked and diced, about 3 c.
1 c. chopped celery
½ c diced red apple, unpeeled
2–3 tbsp. raisins
¼ c. coarsely chopped pecans
1 tsp. curry powder
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. cider vinegar
½ tsp. fresh ground black pepper
½ tsp. ground cayenne pepper
1 c. mayonnaise, or to moisten to taste
1 c. whole berry cranberry sauce

Combine the diced chicken with remaining ingredients in a large bowl, adding more or less mayonnaise to moisten according to your taste. Cover and refrigerate. Before serving, top with whole berry cranberry sauce.

Serves 7–8.

Easy Sweet BBQ Meatballs

Carla (Womack) LeMaster ’84, Director, Advancement Services

2 lbs. premade meatballs, frozen or thawed *
1 can jellied cranberry sauce
1 jar Heinz* chili sauce
2 tbsp. lemon juice
2 tbsp. brown sugar

Place meatballs in a crockpot. Mix together sauce ingredients with a whisk. Pour over meatballs. Cook on low.

* Note: If meatballs are frozen, cook for 6 hours. If meatballs are thawed, cook for 4.
Mocha Punch

Carol Lee ’96, Senior Communications Specialist

6 c. water
½ c. instant chocolate drink mix (like Nesquik*)
½ c. sugar (optional)
¼ c. instant coffee granules
½ gal. vanilla ice cream
½ gal. chocolate ice cream
Whipped cream (as garnish)
Chocolate curls (as garnish)

In a large saucepan, bring water to a boil. Remove from the heat. Add drink mix, sugar, and coffee, and stir until dissolved. Cover and refrigerate for 4 hours or overnight.

About 1 hour before serving, pour mixture into a large punch bowl. Add ice cream by scoopfuls. Stir until partially melted.

Monkey Bread

Carol Lee ’96, Senior Communications Specialist

⅓ c. sugar
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 can refrigerator biscuits cut in quarters
¼ c. butter
⅓ c. brown sugar
⅛ tsp. vanilla

Mix sugar and cinnamon in a medium bowl. Toss biscuit pieces in mixture until completely covered. Place in a greased loaf pan. Melt butter, then mix in brown sugar and vanilla. Pour over biscuits.

Bake at 350° degrees for 30 minutes.
Chocolate Chocolate Chip Cookies

Becky Stowers ’01, Dean of Women
1 box chocolate cake mix
⅓ c. oil
2 eggs
Chocolate chips

Blueberry and Pineapple Dump Cake

Beth (Cram) Porter, Chair, Department of Music and Worship
2 c. fresh/frozen blueberries, or berries of choice
1 large can crushed pineapple with juice
¾ c. sugar
1 box yellow cake mix
1 c. chopped pecans or walnuts
¼ c. sugar

1 stick melted butter or margarine

Preheat oven to 350°. Spray a 9x13 inch baking dish with non-stick spray. Layer blueberries, then pineapple, then sprinkle with ¾ c. sugar. Spread dry cake mix on top, then top with nuts and remaining ¼ c. sugar. Drizzle melted butter evenly over all.

Bake for 25 minutes. After 25 minutes, slice through to allow fruit juices to come through cake mix. (I slice it like I am slicing it into 12 pieces.) Return to the oven for another 25 minutes. It should be nice and brown on the top when done.
Easy Oreo Truffles

Michelle (Rigel) McCune ‘04

1 pkg. (8 oz.) Cream Cheese, softened
1 pkg. (16.6 oz.) OREO Cookies, finely crushed (about 4-1/4 cups), divided
2 pkg. (8 squares each) Semi-Sweet Chocolate, melted (can use white chocolate too!)

MIX cream cheese and 3 cups cookie crumbs until well blended. SHAPE into 48 (1-inch) balls. Dip in melted chocolate; place on waxed paper-covered baking sheet. Sprinkle with remaining cookie crumbs. REFRIGERATE 1 hour or until firm. Store in tightly covered container in refrigerator.

Tilapia and Vegetables

Alise (Merrin) Napp ‘10, Project Coordinator, Creative Services

For an easy, healthy dinner, preheat your oven to 475. Cut a large heart shape out of parchment paper and fold it in half. On one half, place flat lemon slices. Take a filet of fish (frozen tilapia will thaw in a cool water bath within minutes), pat it dry, season with salt and pepper, and place it on top of the lemon slices. Then top with whatever you have around...asparagus, fennel, parsley, capers, shallots, red onion, whatever will go with the fish. Add a tablespoon or more of butter on top of it all. Fold the other half of the parchment paper heart over the food and fold the edges all the way around to create a sealed packet. Stick it on a baking sheet and cook for 15 minutes. Open the packet and enjoy!
FIND A CHURCH WHERE YOU CAN SERVE WITH A GOOD CONSCIENCE AND BE FAITHFUL.

Anonymous ’06

FINDING A CHURCH
The strength of a church isn’t measured in how many people “look like you” or seem to be your age. When my wife and I started attending our church, people our age were nonexistent. But now, many years later, we are invested in the same strong church and have many friends there.

Nate Verwys ’00

Don’t be afraid to go back to the church you grew up in. Get plugged in to ministry immediately. I worked with the high school group immediately after getting out of college and thought the students were so much younger. They weren’t. Many of them are my friends now, and the age gap seems so small.

Andrea (Patterson) Verwys ’01

Get plugged in to a church right away. You will need the support and connection of a small group in your local church. It will be very easy to not attend church as there is no one requiring it anymore. If you go to a large church and are not involved anymore, it is easy to get lost and you may not feel like you belong. This is the time to find the church that is best for you, and it may not be your parents’ church. That will be a big step but one that will profit you the most. You need to be a follower of Christ where your faith is your own, not your school’s or your parents’.

Marianne (Palmer) Schuck ’97

Find a church right away! And even if you can’t find the “right church” quickly, start trying out 20-something groups at churches in your area and commit to going to one that feels like a good fit. I go to a 20-somethings group at one church and Sunday service at another. The point is, get plugged in. Find where you fit and where you can serve. Connect with other Christians your age as well as Christians older than you who will invest in your life. This is huge — bug someone from your new church to go to coffee if you have to! It’s such an encouragement to have older women in my life who will ask me on a regular basis how I’m doing and how my walk with the Lord is. In college, you have a built-in community. You have to be a lot more intentional about creating community after college — but it’s very much worth the effort.

Anonymous ’08

Wherever you are, find a church or group to plug into ASAP! That’s been my biggest help since moving to South Carolina.

Anonymous ’05
Get plugged in to a church. That’s your new source of friends. Once you leave campus, you don’t just have this pool of people sitting around. And depending on where you work, your pool of potential friends may lack Christians. Not that this is a bad thing, but you have to have the balance. I love the people I work with. Some are Christians, and some just don’t seem to believe in anything. But having a good core group of Christians in my life has been huge.

Anonymous ’04

Find a church with a large 20-somethings class. I got plugged in to a church that has hundreds of people in their 20s who are in the same boat as I am, and I developed close friendships there. This has made all the difference for me.

Anonymous ’07

One of the absolute hardest things is not being with your friends and being somewhere where you don’t know anyone. Hang in there! It simply takes more time to find and make friends after college (since you’re not living with them). It took me a good year to get settled and form solid friendships. Sometimes it takes more time, sometimes less. But determine not to get discouraged. God is just waiting to bring a bunch of special new people into your life in unexpected ways. It just may not be in your ideal timing.

Anonymous ’07

FIND A CHURCH WHERE YOU CAN SERVE WITH GOOD CONSCIENCE AND BE FAITHFUL.

Anonymous ’60

Finding a church in a new place can seem intimidating. Where do you start? How long do you look? My primary advice would be not to look forever. While I know some people spend six months trying to find a church and there is some room for finding a good fit, the truth is that if you agree on the major doctrines, the important thing is to get involved. It’s always easy to wonder what else is out there, but to serve is the best way to meet people and to bless the church as a whole.

Mike Webster ’05

The first thing to concern yourself with finding is the church community you are going to invest in after graduation. When you have a family behind you, everything else falls into place. Trust me.

Anonymous ’06

I wish that I had known how important it was to be in fellowship with believers and to be connected into a church. For the first year out of college I mainly kept to myself and didn’t make the effort to get to know anyone at church or really get involved in ministries at church. But my life and spiritual walk are completely different now that I am really connected with other believers.

Anonymous '07

Make sure you find a church that teaches the Word of God! Look for a place that you can minister in, not a place where you will just be ministered to. Remember, the most dynamic programs don’t always produce the most dynamic people. Find a church that teaches and lives according to God’s Word and invest in it and you’ll be ministered to as well as encouraged above and beyond your expectations. Find a place and stay with it through thick and thin. There is great reward to being in the same place for a while around the same people and watching God work in their lives as well as yours over time.

Butch Davis '92

We all need support, encouragement, and accountability. God intended the local church to provide for such needs. Find a church where you can serve with good conscience and be faithful.

Anonymous '60

If you move to an area that’s new, make it a priority to find a good church and to get involved in serving there. My small group at my church has become like a family to me, and God has used them in my life in many ways!

Anonymous '07

Try to meet people your own age wherever you are. It took me awhile to get out there and meet people (I ended up visiting young adults groups at churches) but once I did, I started feeling a lot better about being out of college.

Anonymous '07

One of the key goals after graduation is to find a church and become a vital part of that ministry. You may not be serving God vocationally, but all of us must always be serving Him volitionally through the local church. When looking for that first job after graduation, a key factor needs to be what church to join if you take the job. You may not know which specific church, but you should have options available, so once you get settled in you can join in with a local body of believers and serve Christ there.

Paul E. Smith '77

Most importantly, find a solid Christian community as soon as possible. Don’t give up on this one! It may be hard to find at first because you have to go looking for it! But God supplies all our needs, and this is a need, so keep praying for it.

Anonymous '06
I had a great experience at Cedarville, and I even found that I enjoyed chapel (much to my surprise!). However, listening to speakers in chapel and professors in class really has made it challenging at times to find a church where the pastor is as gifted a speaker as those we were so blessed to learn from during our time at Cedarville. My advice or encouragement would be to take some time after moving away to that new city or state and try out a number of churches and just realize that you’re likely going to be a tough audience. Try not to be so critical that the real message from the Word can’t get through — I’m telling myself this even after graduating in 1984.

Marcia Wiinamaki ’84

Don’t expect a new church to be just like your old church. Don’t waste your time looking for a perfect church. If there was such a thing, you would ruin it if you joined it.

Jeff Gates ’81

No church will be perfect, but find one that teaches the Word and then get involved! You’ve been trained well, and you have a minor in Bible. Use that training to help serve and teach others in a local Bible-preaching church. Now is no time to become a pew-sitter!

Tonya (Stretch) Fawcett ’83

Don’t church-hop too much once you get out. Find a good one and get involved. You’ll have a good support system quicker, and you’ll have an easier time making good friends.

Anonymous ’06

When it comes to actually trying to get a list of other churches, check out the newspaper (often they have a list of churches and service times in the paper on Thursdays or Fridays). Also check the yellow pages and search the Internet. Cedarville also has a church listing, though it may not be up-to-date. I narrowed down the list of churches to try by calling each one on my list first and asking a few questions to get an idea of the type of church it was. So make a list of the things you are looking for in a church and prioritize them. Put nonnegotiable things first, then preferences. That will help you objectively tell whether the church you find meets your needs.

Some preference things to think about: Do you prefer a large or small congregation? Do you prefer contemporary or traditional style of service? Do you have a preferred Bible version? Many things that you might have taken for granted because they were what you always had in your own church may not be the case in other people’s churches.
Also, don’t rule out nondenominational or other denominational churches just because you’ve always been a Baptist or Methodist or Presbyterian. Some other denominations may believe the same things you do. This is especially important if you relocate to an area that doesn’t have many or any of the denominations that you’re used to.

Also, be sure to check out the church’s statement of faith and/or constitution before deciding to stay. Read it well to be sure there aren’t major doctrinal differences.

Remember that you may end up with children before too long, and keep in mind what sort of children and infant ministries the church has.

Some indicators that the church you are looking at is alive and growing are the number and type of ministries that they have, both in the local community and in farther areas, and how many of the people are involved in them.

No matter what church you find, once you’ve made your decision, join and become active!

Hannah (Ballou) Sheldon ’04

Above all, seek truth! A church with a pastoral staff committed to sound doctrine and solid expository teaching is the best foundation for an encouraging, nurturing church home.

Building aesthetics, musical genres, and worship styles may change over the years, but God’s Word and the truth it contains never changes. Look for a local assembly that stands firm on biblical truth and lives out the Gospel. When searching for a church home, look for the strongest teaching available in your area, not just a denominational label.

I am so very thankful for Faith Bible Church in Edmond, Oklahoma, where I have enjoyed fellowship and corporate worship for the ten years we have been in the Oklahoma City metro.

Sharon (Franks) Burgess ’76

Visit a church’s business meeting before you join. A business meeting can be very revealing about the church’s priorities, stability, and integrity.

Jess Spears ’05

The local church has always been God's way of helping us grow, of providing support and accountability, and providing an avenue for service. Seek a church where teaching, evangelism, and fellowship are happening and where people love one another. Begin seeking like-minded people who will encourage you in your pursuit of God. Seek a church that provides a vibrant ministry for children and youth. Don't expect to find the perfect church but do look for one that will either help you grow, or which you can help expand its vision. Attend regularly, give faithfully and form lasting relationships, but always develop relationships outside the church which enable you to have an outreach. Other than marriage and employment, the church has been a stabilizing and growth inducing part of our lives.

Merlin Ager ’60, Professor of Education

Find a Bible-teaching church that fits you and get busy serving the Lord and building godly friendships. And don’t be a self-absorbed whiner; instead, support the leaders with prayer and encouragement.

Mike DiCuirci ’71, Senior Professor of Instrumental Music

When I moved away from home for my first job, I didn’t know where to go to church. So, I decided to search the CU Alumni Directory to see where alumni attended. I found someone on the site who had a website, and on his site he mentioned the church where he taught college and career Sunday school. I visited and found him and his wife to be very nice and accepting, and we had the Cedarville family connection too.

Laura Castle ’06

No matter where you wind up living, find a church and be loyal to it. Also, don’t be too hard on the pastor/speakers at the local church. Don’t expect a pastor of a small country church to be as powerful a speaker as many of the speakers at chapel. One of the problems I had when I first graduated was that I was so accustomed to the stellar services we had every day in chapel, that I was bored by my local church services. It took a while for me to get over that and I fell away from the church for a while because of it.

Rebecca Fison ’97
The Ridge Community Church started as a church plant seven years ago. We are a church of around 150 people who just moved into our first building. If you find yourself in the north metro area of Denver, Colorado, I would love for you to check it out. You can find information at theridgechurch.org.

Erica (Linafelter) Heddings ’03
I MAY NOT KNOW WHAT LIES AHEAD BUT I AM HOLDING THE HAND OF THE ONE WHO KNOWS EACH STEP.

Anonymous ’05

YOUR SPIRITUAL WALK
Often after you graduate, you have dreams to make a difference and not live a “normal” quiet life. The best difference that you can make in this world is to simply obey the Lord. Obey in all aspects of your life, and you will make a difference in your co-workers’, family’s, friends’, and church family’s lives. Your life will make a difference if you follow the command of our Lord: “trust and obey.” It seems like an easy and simple command, but many times it will be difficult when all the plans you make don’t seem to be coming to fruition, but our Lord has greater ones, and you will be richly blessed when you simply trust and obey.

Rachel (Mahl) Kimmell ’04

Take the time to keep in touch with someone as a spiritual mentor. It is important to be growing in Christ, and having someone that is further along in his or her faith keeps you accountable in your growth. Spend time in the word and in prayer every day. Life will only get busier and busier, so guard that time with the Lord.

Anonymous ’07

“Each life holds a unique purpose, designed by God, fulfilled through Him, guided by His word.” —Bonnie Jensen

Anonymous ’98

The best thing I learned in college was to fall deeply in love with Jesus. You probably won’t do what is on your degree, so make your relationship with God the biggest priority.

Michael Clutz ’05

I have no idea who wrote this, and I admit it sounds clichéd, but it happens to be so true in my life: “I admit, I was deceived into believing that because I was a Christian and strive to do ‘good’ that I would in return receive a ‘good’ life, full of blessings. False. A + B does not equal C in this world.” (Read John Piper’s book, When I Don’t Desire God: How to Fight for Joy)

Anonymous ’06

God is in charge of you — not men, not circumstances, and not the economy. He is faithful. I trust Him, and 40 years later, He is still moving me around!

Anonymous ’69

I am a work in progress. Sometimes I love the process, and sometimes I can’t stand it.

Anonymous ’97

Maintain and protect your time with the Lord no matter what comes your way.

Andrea (Patterson) Verwys ’01
Waiting on God isn’t about the suspension of meaning and purpose. It’s part of the meaning and purpose that God has brought into my life. Waiting on God isn’t to be viewed as an obstruction in the way of the plan. Waiting is an essential part of the plan. For the child of God, waiting isn’t simply about what I’ll receive at the end of my wait. No, waiting is much more purposeful, efficient, and practical than that. Waiting is fundamentally about what I’ll become as I wait. God is using the wait to do in and through me exactly what He’s promised. Through the wait He’s changing me. By means of the wait He’s altering the fabric of my thoughts and desires. Through the wait He’s causing me to see and experience new things about Him and His kingdom. And all of this sharpens me, enabling me to be a more useful tool in His redemptive hands.

Anonymous ’08

I may not know what lies ahead, but I am holding the hand of the One who knows each step.

Anonymous ’05

IF YOU DON'T START IT NOW, IT IS HARD TO START LATER! BE DISCIPLINED NOW AND REAP THE REWARDS LATER.

Michelle (Rigel) McCune ’04

I was definitely apprehensive when I was graduating! I had no clue what I was doing; all I could do was pray and trust God to lead me where He wanted me. And He totally did! He provided a great job out of nowhere in the exact place my husband and I wanted to be. It was miraculous! I really like Zephaniah 3:17, and I read that a lot when I’m feeling down or worried and need a reminder of God’s love and care. I also like to just flip through the Psalms when I need comforting and pick out some that speak to me. A quote I just heard recently that I really liked is, “God doesn’t call the equipped; He equips the called.” It’s so great to know that God will fit you to His plan and work through you. You don’t have to try to live life by your own strength; you have to lean on Him and just obey and love Him.

Anonymous ’05

“ ‘Wait on the Lord’ is a constant refrain in the Psalms, and it is a necessary word, for God often keeps us waiting. He is not in such a hurry as we are, and it is not His way to give more light on the future than we need for action in the present, or to guide us more than one step at a time. When in doubt, do nothing, but continue to wait on God. When action is needed, light will come.” — J.I. Packer

Anonymous ’07
Sin is sin. There is no excuse for excusing sin.

Anonymous ’69

I constantly find myself saying, “It doesn’t say in Scripture that the enemy came to snack; it says he came to devour!” When you feel most afraid, overwhelmed, stressed out, or exhausted, it’s because you must be posing quite a threat to the devil, and he wants to consume you. In some ways that is a good thing! At every stage of life, the more we battle with or for God, the more the devil wants to destroy us! Pray fiercely for God to intercede for you, and He will!

Anonymous ’04

Life is not always lived on the mountain tops; it’s often lived in the valleys.

Anonymous ’07

Leaving Cedarville is hard because you enter a world without godly peers living right down the hall, teaching every day in your classroom, or presenting from God’s Word every day. When you leave, work hard to stay in touch with a spiritual mentor at Cedarville or get to know someone else wherever you end up, someone who loves Christ and will encourage you in your walk with Him.

John Cooper ’10

Start making friendships with godly believers who are older than you and who can be a source of encouragement and wisdom when the Cedarville bubble has popped.

Anonymous ’98

Make it a priority to spend time with the Lord daily. Take your Bible everywhere so you can read a little throughout the day at appointments, during your lunch hour, at your desk, or while waiting for the doctor. It is difficult after college to stay in the Word because your routine changes. If you don’t start it now, it is hard to start later! Be disciplined now and reap the rewards later.

Michelle (Rigel) McCune ’04

The key to the spiritual walk is found in two phrases in the Old Testament. Like Abraham in Genesis 17:1, we must walk before God. This means literally to walk in the eyes of God, to live a circumspect life in which we are always consciously aware that God sees and evaluates all that we do, say, and even think. Like Enoch (Gen. 5:22, 24) and Noah (Gen.v 6:9), we must also walk with God. Too often we are tempted to rush ahead of God or to drag our heels behind Him. Or we get distracted by something to the right or to the left of the path God has for us. To walk with God means to stay in step with Him, and let Him take us on the path of His choosing for us. May the Lord bless you as you walk before Him and with Him.

Dan Estes ’74, Distinguished Professor of Old Testament, Biblical and Ministry Studies
Happy Moments, Praise God
Difficult Moments, Seek God
Quiet Moments, Worship God
Painful Moments, Trust God
Every Moment, Thank God
Anonymous ’07

Mentors are so valuable! No matter where God directs you after graduation, make sure you seek out older brothers and sisters in the faith. They offer so much encouragement, insight, and wisdom.
Anonymous ’06

OK, I’m not really a graduate, but I feel I graduate every year. We all need to reboot our lives every day because past commitments can get lost in the urgencies of today. His mercies are new every morning. Make up your mind today what kind of person you want to become. It is among the most important decisions you make. If you don’t make that decision positively, you are making a decision that puts the trajectory of your life in the hands of others or circumstances. Decide now, give it to the Lord, and affirm it daily. Watch what He does as a result. You will never be sorry. Blessings always!
Bill Brown, President

Don’t expect to have everything worked out or figured out right away. I was pressuring myself to know exactly what I wanted to do, where I wanted to live, etc. Just like any big change, it’s a process. And you don’t have to feel bad about yourself, no matter how long it takes to adjust. Just trust that God is directing your steps — that’s what He does.
Anonymous ’05

“Above all else, guard your heart, for it is the wellspring of life” (Prov. 4:23). Our hearts make up the center of our spiritual lives. Our spiritual nutrition is so important. Let me suggest a great exercise program. Be sure to have a daily intake of the Word of God. Second, keep exercising with prayer. Third, live every day with the expectation that Jesus Christ could return at any moment. Finally, trust God no matter what and without reservation.

I guess I should add one more thing: the Book of Revelation is an exciting book! Look for the majesty and glory of God throughout its chapters. Our God is an awesome God!
Robert Rohm ’68, Vice President, Christian Ministries

Make it a priority and put effort into finding a strong Christian community to be a part of. After I left the Cedarville community, I went back home to Maryland and my home church. Since the church and atmosphere had changed immensely in the four years I had been away at school, I struggled to feel connected. I eventually left and half-heartedly looked for another fellowship. Since it was easy at Cedarville to find other believers, I was easily discouraged when I didn’t quickly find another fellowship. I ended up wandering and straying for several years until God pulled me back in and brought me to my cousin’s church. Through them I connected with a church near my home and eventually developed a relationship with a young woman there who is now my wife. I work in the children’s ministry and helped start a young adults’ ministry there.

I’ve seen the same thing happen to some college friends, too, and they have yet to “return.” If you are not on your guard, it will be easy to fall away. Congratulations on graduating and best wishes for your future.
Edward Low ’02

Thoughts of life after the ’Ville can be scary. Let me encourage you — life does go on after the ’Ville! Just like Pastor Rohm said at Getting Started Weekend, God does not say, “Oh, I go everywhere except Ohio.” There are “No Giants in the Land.” Take one day at a time. God will provide as He has before in your life. God is not finished with you yet; rather, He is just beginning.
Ves Rieches ’11

Put your Bible minor to use. Seriously. Take the time to do lexicon searches and word studies and observations; if you never got into it in school, it’ll revolutionize the way that you look at the Word. If you did, it’ll keep you sane in a world full of conflict, conflicting interpretation, and mediocrity.
Rob Cook ’08

Take as much time now as you can with your Bible and prayer, and spiritual disciplines. I always thought I was a “pretty good kid,” and didn’t always make my relationship with Christ the priority it should be. If my relationship with Him had been stronger as a student, I believe I would have been better equipped to deal with the ups and downs of life after college! Remember that old song about the wise man building his house upon the Rock, and it standing strong when the storms come? That is exactly what I mean!
Brett Buckingham ’02
Whether you’re graduating, wondering about a job, wanting to be married, or overall mystified about what to do next, God has provided an answer in Scripture. “What do I do next?” Answer: “Trust in the Lord and do good. Dwell in the land and feed on his faithfulness. Delight yourself also in the Lord and He shall give you the desires of your heart” (Ps. 37:30-34). God bless and keep you, brothers and sisters--I await the day we’ll reunite in heaven with Jesus Christ and every saint who has ever lived!

Hannah Bryan ’12

As much as I appreciated Cedarville, I was eager to get out into the world and shine my light! Before graduation, I began praying that God would lead me to new friends with whom I could share the Gospel. Two weeks after graduation, I started my first job. Immediately, I connected with one of my co-workers. We quickly became friends. My husband and I were open about our faith and shared it whenever we had an opportunity. Two years later, she and her husband came to Christ. Twenty-five years later, we are still friends. They have reared their children to love the Lord and their family has influenced many others for Christ. Don’t be afraid to reach out to others with the Gospel. Be yourself and pray for those friendships.

Wendy (Datzman) Fain ’87

I don’t think I really understood that a daily, consistent walk with the Lord was all that I needed to know His will for my life. I think I spent a lot of time questioning what I should do instead of going out and doing something.

Anonymous ’07
“DON’T LET ANYONE ELSE’S PLANS OR ATTITUDES STEAL YOUR JOY.”
Anonymous ’09

GOALS AND LIFE LESSONS
You have heard this practically every day for the past four years in chapel, in class, in Bible study, in hall meetings, everywhere! But seriously, strive after Christ in all of your decisions. Do not worry about getting the greatest job with the highest pay, best benefits, and amazing opportunities for growth. Simply concern yourself with living a life that is glorifying to your Lord and Savior. When things are great, praise Him. When things are down, praise Him. Live your life for Him, and no matter what you are doing, you will be a success!

Brett Buckingham ’02

It is great to graduate with the feeling that you are ready to “conquer the world.” After all, there are causes worth dying for. You just spent four years learning to think biblically. You have the tools you need. Be sure along the way you ask God to do a work inside of you. Discover where you need to grow, and allow God, through His Word and the body of believers, to shape your character. It is very empty to reach your 40s and still not be self-aware. You need to always be a student of God’s Word, of the ever-changing culture, and of your own heart. Never stop growing. Your teachers poured their lives into you. Now, as you continue to grow, find someone else into whose life you can pour yours. I define discipleship as reproducing your life in someone else in a close personal relationship. It is risky, messy, and sometimes dangerous, but it’s rewarding.

Finally, do not be too hasty to measure what you have achieved. God keeps better score than man does. Always work for His “well done, good and faithful servant.” I only spent four years at Cedarville, but those years changed me forever. I also met my wife there, which in and of itself was worth it all.

Stephen Holman ’77

When I graduated from college and didn’t know what the future held. I wish I would have known that instead of focusing on what I’m waiting to receive, I should turn my gaze to God and ask Him to make me “a more useful tool in His redemptive hands.”

Anonymous ’03

Make God your #1. There is no other. Also, soak up every minute of chapel. Believe it or not, you’ll miss it. To this day, I can still recall some of the messages I heard!

Sherri (Wilson) Patterson ’84
Let the Lord lead your steps. We may have our idea or plan of what we want to accomplish, but He has another plan for our lives. Being obedient to the Lord in all things is a great place to be!
Heidi (Ryan) Lindley ‘87

Enjoy discovering how small the world really can be. There are Cedarville grads everywhere!
Anonymous ‘97

Continue to pursue your life goals and dreams with an open mind, and always be prepared to walk through an unexpected door. Plans change and so do expectations. Stay flexible.
Cameron Arch ‘06

Life will get busy, and you and your close friends from college will go through different transitions. It will take work to stay in touch and keep up with what’s going on in each other’s lives, but it is well worth it! I have made great friends since graduating, but the friendships I formed while a student at Cedarville are priceless. Six years later we are scattered across the country, but I would still count them as my closest friends.
Anonymous ‘04

Do not take your friends for granted. Let them love you, love them well, and get over the small things. Appreciate people and all they have to offer.
Anonymous ‘07

Exercise! You have no homework! Plenty of time to stretch, cool down, and get going! Take advantage!
Anonymous ‘09

Don’t go to bed angry. Ever.
Anonymous ‘06

Keep in touch with friends from college. Those are the relationships that last.
Anonymous ‘69

There is so much I didn’t know when I graduated. I didn’t have a job, didn’t have a boyfriend, didn’t have a clue where I was going to live or what I was going to do. I really didn’t know anything about what was ahead of me. The thing is, I don’t wish I had known the answers to all of those things when I graduated. I remember seeing so many of my friends getting married right after graduation or having their jobs lined up and ready for them. It wasn’t until I left Cedarville and got a job that God provided in His time that I realized that I wasn’t unusual. And that the “real” world is full of a lot more people like me than like the friends I graduated with. I felt like no one was walking the same path as I was. Turns out, not knowing where I was going or what I was going to do when I got there is actually more “real life” than I thought. And even now, married and with a job, I realize more than ever that I still don’t know what is ahead of me. I realize now that while the “real life” part really stays the same, the future is unknown. Always. That’s what’s so great about God. He always provides, He always protects, and He is always faithful to lead in the right paths at the right times, even if that’s not the cookie cutter life I thought I wanted. I wish I knew then just how faithful God would be and how He would continue to prove Himself each and every step of the way. And what a great story it is to tell how God orchestrated something into existence because you know it’s 100 percent true.
Anonymous ’01

When I graduated, I didn’t realize how much I still had yet to learn — about life, working, being a godly woman, and what it means to live out my faith in everything I do — and I didn’t realize that that’s OK!
Anonymous ’03

Build your relationship with God by seeking Him daily with prayer and reading His Word. Go out into the world with confidence and courage knowing that God will guide you, protect you, and provide for you. Any job that you end up doing, whether you work as an executive or a janitor, do your best, give your all, and work as if the Lord is your boss and you are seeking to please Him. Life is an adventure. Sit back and enjoy the ride.
Anonymous ’96

Always live below your means. Don’t waste too much time on the Internet.
Anonymous ’01

I knew that God would take care of me, but I don’t know that I really believed it. Now I feel silly looking back on all the times I stressed about this, that, or the other thing. Not everyone’s path goes according to plan, and I was stressed about life and was frustrated that God wasn’t providing a quicker solution. But the biggest thing I’ve learned since graduating is not to just know that God will take care of me but to really let that sink in and believe it. Wow, that’s hard. Especially after college when you are taught to take life by the horns and Career Services has told you about all the engineers working at Rolls-Royce and all the interns at the White House. You feel like you are supposed to get something of that stature, and when you don’t, it’s a let down. But God’s there. He’s got a plan. He may not bring it about as quickly as the kid who grabs a big job and a signing bonus right after shaking President Brown’s hand ... but something’s coming.

Anonymous ’06

If you’re not already planning to get married, wait. Getting married makes your life really complicated — a good complicated, but don’t rush it. Also, pay double on your loans if you have them (and you can afford to); it’s nice to be ahead of the game if you miss a payment or your car breaks down. Also, don’t sell yourself short because you went to Cedarville. I know kids who went to Dartmouth and Yale, and they’ve got nothing on you. If your major doesn’t give you an obvious outlet for employment and you have to work a job to make money (this is what happened to me) volunteer to do something you love (on weekends and in the evening) and see if that volunteer network will lead to a different job. Stay accountable. When I left Cedarville, I made sure to establish a connection with a mentor in my new church. Christ created us to live in community, and while at Cedarville it’s really easy to find community, but if you’re like me, after school you have to work for it.

Anonymous ’05

College is not the end all. There is so much more to do and learn. Once you leave campus, yes, there are adjustments to make, but life only takes off from graduation.

Anonymous ’04

“Don’t seek an opportunity to be offended.” Or, in more contemporary terms, “Let things roll.”

Anonymous ’03

If you feel God is telling you to do something, listen and do it no matter how radical or crazy or awkward it may seem.

Anonymous ’06

Be involved in the city you live in. Overseas missions are vital — but don’t neglect your neighborhood! Tutor inner-city kids, feed the homeless, and get to know your nail lady, hair lady, mailman, neighbors, and the gas station attendants. Bring them a meal on Thanksgiving, get them a Christmas present, serve them!

Anonymous ’99

Find the small things that make you happy. For example, I got new windshield wiper blades today, and I was excited. I haven’t had functional wiper blades in a year and a half. Today was the first day I’ve successfully seen out of my windshield.

Anonymous ’98

No one tells you the first year out of college is going to be possibly the hardest year yet. Nothing is familiar. If you move home, it’s all different than when you left for college. If you’re still friends with your old friends, they might not come back, so you’re home but friendless. You have to learn to relate to everyone from home as who you are now, and you might not even be totally sure, but you’re definitely not who you were four years ago. It’s life, not academia anymore, and you have work and responsibilities. And if you move away, it’s obviously unfamiliar, too. You don’t even know where to find the fast food places. You have to Mapquest getting to work. What happens when your car dies? Where do you go, who do you trust? I have to cook? And what do I cook!? And clean, and where’s all my money? And who’s this company sending me a bill every month? Who do they think they are?! Can’t I just defer payments until I gradu— Oh wait... But don’t worry; you’ll settle in. Get involved, get plugged in, and create a niche. Also, don’t abandon your first love like the church of Ephesus. They had a lot going for them, Jesus commends them, then He lays the hammer down on them. The church was doing, doing, doing, and it looked great, but it really had no love for Christ. Keep your eyes on Christ and your heart in tune with Him. Seek Him first. Get plugged in and serve as a response of gratefulness and an act of worship. Do it because you love, not because you’re obligated. Always stay away from religion and stay in a relationship with our Creator and Redeemer! Anonymous ’07

Be kind to yourself. You are your own worst critic. But don’t let yourself off too easily and overlook things that you can do better or ways you can go deeper. Anonymous ’09

There is life beyond Cedarville. I had so many great friends and wonderful times at college, but there are many blessed moments ahead of you. Anonymous ’01

After graduation, get involved in as many things as possible. Volunteer with a local nonprofit, join a civic group, get involved with a church, create personal and professional relationships. These will be the people that stay with you, and they will become the friends and peers that you will turn to for encouragement and guidance. Anonymous ’98

Don’t let anyone else’s plans or attitudes steal your joy. God will bring along the perfect husband, friend, job, home, etc., in His perfect time. Be content and thankful and watch God bless and provide. Anonymous ’09

GET PLUGGED IN AND SERVE AS A RESPONSE OF GRATITUDE AND AN ACT OF WORSHIP.
Anonymous ’07

Anonymous '09
Even if you don't have plans for after college, that doesn't mean that you don't have a great future. You don't need to be connected to someone; you don't need to have a job lined up. The more you need, the more you learn to depend on God, and the more you develop your relationship with Him. Take time to discover who you are! Don't rely on others to tell you who you are, make you who you are, or force you to be someone you are not. Discover who you are in God and be comfortable with that.

Anonymous '97

It's not about what you do, and it's not about where you go. It's all about doing what you do and going where you go with Jesus and watching Him work in and through your life. I'm not where I thought or hoped I would be when I graduated from college, but I'm where God wants me to be, and He is growing His kingdom and giving me great opportunities where I am now. All I strive to do is live my life faithfully for Him and enjoy watching Him work.

Anonymous '07

I wish I had realized that God already knew my future and that I just had to wait for him to reveal it to me. No need to stress over it. Now I remind myself of this almost daily. Seek Him through reading His word and worship, and He will direct you.

Anonymous '98

In all areas of life, “people will give you exactly what you are willing to accept,” no matter if it’s between employees, family members, or friends.

Chuck McKinney, Retired Supervisor of Pioneer Food Services

Stay disciplined. It is easy to fall off track and eat junk food, not exercise, not do your devotions, etc., when no one is watching! Honor God in all things!

Anonymous '00

Don’t overkill on taking life too seriously. Take time to laugh — at everything! It may not be at the same time as others, but laugh anyway!

Anonymous '69

God’s timing is absolutely perfect, and He’ll put you where He wants you when He wants you to be there. You likely won’t agree with His timing, but He always comes through. Our faith just needs to be exercised every once in a while.

Anonymous '98
Life after graduation has a steep learning curve if you don’t have a good plan in place before commencement. Planning helps make the transition from college to the rest of your life smoother (but not necessarily easier). Have backup plans and be flexible. God doesn’t always lead you where you plan on going. Flexibility helps when you are led down a path you don’t expect. If you had asked me during my sophomore, junior, and senior years whether I saw myself spending time in either Iraq or Afghanistan, I would have laughed at you. Now having spent two deployments in Iraq and one in Afghanistan, I can attest to the usefulness of planning and flexibility in life. I can also say this with certainty: don’t resist if you find your life being taken in an unplanned direction. God knows what’s best for you and He’ll take you where you need to go even if you initially resist.

_Chris Kelleher ’03_

Go to every wedding, funeral, shower, birthday party, and graduation that you’re invited to. It’s important to witness the lives of those you love.

Anonymous ’06

Don’t be afraid to only plan one step ahead at a time in life. Many times God will lead you to a job or home to simply prepare you for the next step. If you plan ten years in advance, you’ll only get frustrated when God shuts a door you hoped would open.

_Trevor Schuh ’06_

Is there life after Cedarville? I loved Cedarville so much, I wasn’t sure how I’d feel moving on, but post-college life has been wonderful. There are so many more adventures to come, whether that’s getting married, living overseas, raising children, or serving faithfully in full-time ministry. God may have something completely different in mind for your life than what you’re imagining, but it will be good!

Anonymous ’05

Never put off until tomorrow what you can do today.

_Bill Bigham, Vice President for Advancement_

You will find throughout life that everything you studied in college is useful in some way. It is important to use the training you received at Cedarville to show love and compassion to the people around you. It also is important to maintain life-long friendships with your college friends and professors, even if it is just a Christmas letter or birthday card every year. It is so important to have long-term friends with whom to share burdens and prayer requests as well as milestones and the joys of life.

_Sheila (Solomon) Beers ’69_

Remember this: God works _all things_ together for good. While choices you make may not bring an immediate “reward” or even positive results, that is the direction
God led you in. So look for what God is teaching you and growing you in even through the difficulties that may arise. Read Genesis 12 and God’s call on Abram and realize that God’s calling may be to a place that takes time to cultivate and that it may take time to realize God’s rewards.

Butch Davis ’92

When you travel, always take an extra pair of underwear with you.
David Pensworth ’91

My advice would be to “walk in a manner worthy of the calling with which you have been called.” Ephesians 4:1 indicates we are called to a vocation and that we should walk as professionals. It is not about what we accomplish but about who we are in Christ. If we keep our focus on Him and try to please Him in all we do (Eph. 10:5), God will use us to impact those around us. Stay close to Him, persist in all circumstances, and think more highly of others than yourself and all will go well. Blessings!

John Gredy, Provost

Remember that life is short and no one — no human — has it all figured out. However, we have been given a perfect guide, God’s Word, to help us along our way.
Anonymous ’05

Best advice I ever got at Cedarville: Mrs. Wheeler, a comm arts prof, saw me in the parking lot by the ENS just weeks before graduation. She asked how I was doing. I was freaking out. She asked why. Well, everyone else knew what they were doing, had their lives planned, but I didn’t. I thought maybe I should be further along than that after four years of college, and at that point I only had days to figure it out. I will never forget her wise words: “Oh, honey. You’ve got time.” No one at Cedarville had said anything like this to me before. All anyone asks when you’re a senior is “What are your plans?” But she said, “You’re going to need a job, so get a job. Try something that sounds interesting. Maybe you’ll love it, maybe you’ll hate it. That’s OK. If you hate it, get a different one. By the time you’re to your thirties, you’ll need to think about things like insurance and a 401(k), but that’s a ways off. You’ve got all kinds of time.” I’ve since told her how much that moment meant to me. And as long as I’ve worked in a college setting, it’s been my joy to share this advice with students: Please don’t peak at 21! It’s too early to “have it all together.” If your intent is to live the plan that you made at this point in your life, you close yourself off to whatever doesn’t fit in your plan. There’s so much more in the world that you haven’t even heard of yet. Live with the intent to keep learning. Live open to the knowledge, experiences, friendships, and environments that will come.

Carol Lee ’96, Senior Communications Specialist
Having graduated from college, many of you will have the opportunity to be wildly successful in life. But always keep in mind that the only thing worse than failure is succeeding at something that doesn’t matter in light of eternity. Live your life “on mission” in the world, investing in what is eternal rather than temporal. A mentor of mine once told me that there are really only two things that God is going to take off this planet, two things that are eternal: God’s Word and people. The secret to a life of significance is to wrap it around these two things. Immerse yourself regularly in the Word of God and take every opportunity to intentionally invest it into the lives of people around you.

My prayer for you as you graduate is that you won’t just go where you can make the biggest paycheck but that you’ll go where you can make the biggest dent for the kingdom of God! Never lose sight of the fact that this life is merely the prelude to something far greater! Live by faith, and don’t get too comfortable here (Heb. 11)!

Mark Irving ’94, Director, Discipleship Ministries

It doesn’t seem fair. You were made for community, and most of you have found it while at Cedarville. For four short years, you’ve enjoyed it and perhaps even started to take it for granted. Now they’re over and you’re graduating. Perhaps you’re moving back home, or perhaps you’re moving to some far away city to begin work. Either way, your community is going to change.

I met all of my best friends while at Cedarville. We laughed together, prayed together, and lived together. Now we’re spread across the continent, one of us is married, and another will soon be engaged. We went from seeing each other every day, to at best a phone call once a week.

I tell you this not to make you despair, but to give you hope. You are not alone. We all experience this change in community and some take it better than others. Some seem to fall into new community as easily as breathing. Others, like me, are slow to make new friends because it feels like letting go of the old. But we all experience the change in community, and you can take comfort in knowing that “it’s not just me. I’m not the only one who sometimes feels alone and I don’t have to dwell on those thoughts.”

Treasure your time from Cedarville, but don’t cling to it like a life preserver. Thank God for the past you’ve had, then go out and enjoy the future that He’s given you.

Andrew Powell ’08

The debilitating effects of fear can cripple you. Don’t let them.

Anonymous ’05
Know the Heimlich maneuver, but take small bites and chew thoroughly so as not to find it necessary.

John Mortensen, Professor of Piano

I suspect too many Christians fall into the rut of getting into schedules involving only church, work, and home. Remaining single has kept my eyes open to the fact that I need to be aware of the opportunities outside those three avenues. I’ve learned to check out community or charity events in local newspapers, calendars of community colleges, and radio station websites. Do you miss hearing the speakers you heard in chapel? Search the Internet to see if any of your favorites are having conferences near you. It’s good to find a home church, yet it doesn’t hurt to visit other churches occasionally to get a feel for the spiritual vibrancy/effectiveness in your area. And if another church is having a special speaker or mission event, you can grow there too from attending or volunteering. Find out who your representatives are and pray for them. Attend events of the ones you support. Oh, and if you don’t find friends who will go with you to the events you desire to attend, go anyway. You might even make more friends who like those types of events too.

Valery Van Wingerden ‘05

One of the great things about Cedarville is the atmosphere: safe, comfortable, kind, trustworthy, etc. (I remember someone finding $20 and posting it on CU Classifieds!) However, I was shocked and heartbroken when, 3 months after graduation and living in Tennessee, my car was stolen. I adapted to, and even embraced, the “CU bubble,” which very quickly busted in front of me. Not only was I reminded that not all people are kind and honest, but my husband and I lost a lot of money because someone stole my car. A $500 insurance deductible, time off work, going to court twice to testify, and buying another car was a little different than the life we’d imagined as newlyweds. It was certainly a harsh reality check!

On the other hand, it helps to remember that Christ had to pay for my sins too.

Amanda (Kirby) Amerine ‘07
Get a real degree (i.e., something that will pay the mortgage). Too many kids today are getting degrees that may be interesting and fun to get, but end up delivering pizza or driving a bus like me. You will live a very frustrated life not living up to your potential providing for your family.

I taught in a Christian school for 23 years and LOVED every minute of it. But when the schools I taught at closed, there was nowhere to go without a current license. Hence, I work for $10 an hour and barely make it. The thing that bothers me the most is that my kids missed going to Cedarville because we couldn’t afford it. I did not want them graduating with $80,000 in loans. That’s almost a mortgage in my area.

Get a good degree you can use. Stay updated in your area and keep up with your licenses. And most importantly, get GOOD counsel from people NOT part of the “Ivory Tower” fantasy land. It does not exist in the real world.

Jeff Acker ’80

As you graduate from Cedarville I know you have high hopes and dreams, which is great. Yet I caution you to keep looking to God for your answers and be open to whatever he has for you. If you had told me 23 years ago as I graduated from Cedarville that I would be working as a custodian for the university, I would have told you were crazy. Yet that is where God has placed me at this time in my life. You never know where God might be able to use you in a great way. Be open to that leading even if it wasn’t what you had planned.

Talitha Long ’88

There are about eight million things I’ve learned since graduating from the ‘Ville, so I could go on and on — and might! But here’s the deal in a distilled version. The Lord matters, and so do people. You may not be in the job you studied for, and you may not be married the moment you wished. However, the Lord has a plan, and all of the pieces are falling into place, so, for goodness’ sake, wait for it! You won’t like what you get on your own, not for long, but if you let God lead and call the shots, you will love what He accomplishes; and the way He does it will leave your mouth hanging open in amazement. He takes seemingly-inconsequential events and uses them to bring glory to His name and delight to your heart. You will not feel sorry He did it that way once you understand what He’s doing, so save yourself some angst and just let Him work it all out the right way the first time. Then you’ll stand back as I do and know He knew what He was doing. So skip the worry and heartache, and just follow Him. That’s it. (Repeat as needed!)

Merry Damon ’82
This is going to sound cliché, but don’t be afraid to pursue your dreams. Find something you are passionate about and go for it. Live your life so you have no regrets. If God puts something in your heart, don’t be afraid to follow it. He blesses you so much when you follow him even if it is to the ends of the Earth.
Amy Keller ’08

The world is watching everything you do. Abstain from sinful desires that war against your soul. By doing so, you honor God and represent Him well.
Anonymous ’98

Make sure you keep up your fitness routine. The pounds will pack on quickly if you don’t work out. You are not a teenager anymore!
Anonymous ’00

IF YOU LET GOD LEAD AND CALL THE SHOTS, YOU WILL LOVE WHAT HE ACCOMPLISHES.

Merry Damon ’82

Don’t forget how important your family is, even now that you have graduated. Modern American society downplays the role of the family in a person’s life, but I strongly believe that God puts us all into a family for our protection and edification — for life. You will be doing this as an adult now; that is the only difference. Caring for and sharing our experiences with our families, I believe, is one of the greatest ministries God gives us. Start planning now how you will care for your parents when they are old (yes, I am serious). Make the principle taught in verses such as I Timothy 5:4 a part of your life now!
Anonymous ’08
“THROUGH THE INSTITUTION OF MARRIAGE AND FAMILY, GOD HAS GIVEN US THE PRECIOUS OPPORTUNITY TO INFLUENCE GENERATIONS TO COME.”

Beverly (Keist) Jacobson ’97

MARRIAGE AND RELATIONSHIPS
If you get married after you graduate, and both you and your spouse are working, do your best to live off ONLY the husband’s salary. Not only can you save the wife’s salary to either pay off school loans very early or put a large down payment on a house, but you will also be in a position that allows the wife to stay home when children come along, without having to greatly adjust your “standard of living.”

Anonymous ’90

Ladies, no matter how great your fervor in your chosen profession, there may come a day when your heart longs to stay home with your kids. This is OK! It is not a waste of your college education. There are many opportunities at home to use what you learned at CU. So feel free to give your heart to your family during that phase of life with joy. Work will wait.

Anonymous ’86

If you graduate and will not be getting married any time in the foreseeable future, don’t feel like you are a “second-rate” person. View your singleness as a time to do and/or accomplish things you could never have time or opportunity to do if you were “tied down” in a marriage. Also, you will have time to mature further and figure out who you really are beyond college life, and you will be able to choose more wisely who it is you will be spending the rest of your life.

Anonymous ’90

Don’t be in a hurry to get married. You have the rest of your life for that. If you didn’t find someone at Cedarville, don’t worry about it. God will bring the right person at the right time. In the meantime, focus on the ministry you can have and the things you can do as a single person. Learn how to live on your own. Singleness is a gift.

Then, when your spouse does come along, learn how to do ministry and life as a team. If your significant other doesn’t challenge you to grow closer to God and be a better person, they shouldn’t become your spouse. And vice versa. Make sure you are encouraging their growth as well.

Alise (Merrin) Napp ’10, Project Coordinator, Creative Services

BY ALLOWING GOD TO TRULY BE LORD OF OUR LIVES, WE HAND OVER THE VISION OF WHAT WE THINK OUR LIVES AND INFLUENCE WILL BE.

Beverly (Keist) Jacobson ’97

Make it a point to stay in touch. The friends you make at Cedarville are unlike any other. They will be the standard you use to measure all other relationships, if you stay in touch.

Greg Davis ’01
If you didn’t find anyone at Cedarville, don’t worry ... it’s not too late! Believe it or not, there are other opportunities to find godly men and women outside of Cedarville, and you don’t even have to look. Pray, follow God’s leading into whatever vocation he has for you, don’t give up, and keep praying for God’s perfect timing. He will lead, guide, and direct the mate He has for you even if it didn’t happen while you were at Cedarville. It might be a year, it might be 10, just keep trusting in Him for His perfect timing. If you are trusting Him, you will know when the time is right. No rushing in this advice category!

Kristi (Jonker) Calkins ’02

DON’T BE IN A HURRY TO GET MARRIED.

Alise (Merrin) Napp ’10, Project Coordinator, Creative Services

I had a grand vision for changing the world after leaving Cedarville. I wish I had taken more time to think about just how that might look, because my vision of world change at that time was quite narrow. I assumed I would use my teaching degree, spending years in the classroom, teaching and mentoring kids and, Lord willing, influencing them for Christ.

Sixteen years later, my world has turned upside down — in a good and blessed way! I am married to the love of my life, an Air Force man who moves us every few years (or less). God has given us a growing family with six children so far, four of whom we homeschool. I haven’t stepped foot in a classroom since 2000, but you know what? I have no regrets.

I never would have envisioned myself as one of those “stay-at-home” types. One reason I wanted to teach was so that my schedule would match the kids’ schedules — we’d only have two or three kids, you know; any more than that would interrupt the ministry and impact we could have on the world around us!

Oh, Father, forgive me for my arrogance and for not seeing the beauty of your plan, YOUR vision for evangelism and discipleship! It begins in the HOME. My first ministry is to my husband then to my children. By allowing God to truly be Lord of our lives, we hand over the vision of what we think our lives and influence will be and say, “Not my will, but yours be done.”

Through the institution of marriage and family, God has given us the precious opportunity to influence generations to come. A college degree is a wonderful thing, but we shouldn’t allow our education to cause us to overlook the ministry that blossoms from the heart right within our own home.

Beverly (Keist) Jacobson ’97
It’s OK to graduate as a single. There is so much growth that happens between 22–25, that what you’re looking for as an 18-22-year-old will change by the time you’re 25.

Abby Douglas ’09

Friends: If they are special to you, pursue them; don’t let them get away.

Dating: Just because you’ve been dating in college doesn’t mean you are supposed to get married. Pray and ask for His will, not yours.

Anna Futoran ’10

At church, when you and your spouse choose to get involved in a ministry, do it together. Try to avoid the ministries that separate your time and efforts because soon you will be “ships passing in the wind” and spending a lot of time serving but not serving together! While your wife may want to work with little kids and guys may not be able to stand little kids, do it together and grow in it. It is so rewarding to minister together. We have kept this practice even as God has blessed us with children, and we now include our children, when possible, in ministering alongside of us.

Butch Davis ’92

I know that a lot of times especially girls from Cedarville feel like they have no future if they are not with a guy. So sad. It seems like we females just try to find our identity in other people instead of who we are in Christ. So, being able to be independent of others and know who we are in Christ is so important, more than even a degree.

Anonymous ’97

Don’t follow a man that you’re not married to yet! If God wants you together, He will make it happen long distance and then it will be worth the wait!

Anonymous ’69

Marriage and being in love is not the ultimate goal in this world. If married, realize that for the rest of your life the other person will be put before you and your needs in every circumstance. And this is what love is.

Anonymous ’07

If you graduate from Cedarville and you’re not engaged or married (or even dating anyone), it’s OK! God will guide your life in that direction in His right time. And while you wait, make the most of your life.

Andrea (Burnett) Dewhurst ’06
A Blessing for the Cedarville Body
Taryn Hoefert '96

Students of Cedarville,
May your plans be interrupted, disrupted, rearranged.
May you find yourselves far outside your comfort zones.
May your waters be stirred and your weaknesses laid bare so that the beauty of God could be made more visible.
May all you lack be used by Him as well as all you have.
May your vulnerability be an act of worship.
May your Christ-centered minds be sharpened, hearts softened, eyes widened, hands opened, and wills daily relinquished to your King.
May you realize the seemingly serendipitous moments in your life have been orchestrated by an all-knowing, plan-having, loving Father.
May your own agendas not get in the way of God's.
May these cornfields surrounding you be a constant reminder of a the beautiful, sometimes confusing, truth-uneartthing and life-altering season in which God has placed you to grow, become, thrive, and catapult you into changing the world.
May your devotion to Jesus be unwavering.
If the moment your own dream dies and God's dream for your life taking root has not yet arrived, may it soon.
May you with all boldness wave the white flag over your life and offer it to God as His loving channel meeting human needs to His glory.
May you not choose the path of least resistance but of greatest submission to your Creator.
May every step you take across this campus, every credit hour accrued, every movement you make towards that moment your diploma is placed in your hands be another layer of your surrender to God.
May your cap thrown in the air your last day on this campus be your symbol of a life offered up, a lifetime of servanthood to the SERVANT OF ALL.

AMEN.

Prayed in Alumni Week chapel, Wednesday, September 28, 2011.